Dean says Nixon tried for cover-up

(Related story, page 11)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ousted White House Counsel John W. Dean has told investigators that President Nixon was involved in the first four months of this year in more than 30 discussions of cover-up aspects of the Watergate scandal, it was reported Sunday.

Nixon personally told the nation April 30, and said again May 22, that he had no prior knowledge of the break-in and knew nothing of any efforts to cover up the case or buy silence from the seven men convicted for the wiretapping activities earlier this year.

The White House quickly issued a categorical denial of "the assertions and implications" of the published accounts of Dean's alleged statements to Senate investigators and federal prosecutors after the reports appeared in The Washington Post and The New York Times.

In a parallel development, convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr., said he was convinced four months before the bugging and break-in at Democratic headquarters last June 17 that Nixon set the operation in motion, approved it and followed through on it. McCord said he had no direct knowledge of that and was offering only a personal conclusion.

Dean, fired by Nixon on April 30, has been seeking immunity from prosecution in return for his cooperation in telling what he knows of the case and any White House involvement before and after the break-in.

The special Senate Watergate investigating committee, which resumes its televised hearings Tuesday, has scheduled Dean as a witness later in the proceedings.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the special Watergate committee, said Sunday he would not delay the hearings until all criminal indictments in the case are returned by a federal grand jury — as requested by Archibald Cox, the government's new special prosecutor.

Government attorneys said a week ago that further indictments were expected within 60 to 90 days and they indicated that some of the persons likely to be charged were scheduled to appear at the Senate hearings, raising the possibility their public testimony might make it hard to prosecute them later.

Ervin, speaking to reporters after delivering a commencement address at Boston University Law School, said he felt that "if the prosecution doesn't have enough after a year to convict, I do not think they should ask someone else to delay." He said he thought "the American people are entitled to the truth on this matter" and that he would "insist we go ahead" with the hearings when committee members meet today.

The Post cited "reliable sources" in reporting that Dean informed Senate investigators and federal prosecutors that he discussed aspects of a cover-up either directly with the President or in Nixon's presence.

Soviet SST explodes, kills 14, wrecks 100 buildings

PARIS (UPI) — The first production model of the Soviet Tupolev 144 supersonic airliner exploded in a ball of flame over the Paris International Air Show Sunday, then crashed in blazing fragments that smashed more than 100 buildings in two villages near Le Bourget airport.

The prefecture of the district said at least 14 persons were killed in the crash, the first of a supersonic civil airliner.

"We are continuing to search in case there are more bodies, which we pray there will not be," a prefecture spokesman said.

The dead included six crewmen reported to have been aboard the plane, the prefecture said. The other eight victims were in Goussainville, a village of about 15,000 located one mile from the airport on the northern edge of Paris. At least 28 others on the ground were injured.

Earlier reports from airport officials that 30 persons had been killed on the ground were the result of counting seriously injured among the dead, the prefecture said. The bodies of five men and three women were recovered in the village. The bodies of two crewmembers also have been recovered, the prefecture said, and the other four crewmen are missing and presumed dead.

Pieces of the plane, the pride of the Soviet Union's civil air fleet, rained down on Goussainville and the neighboring hamlet of Tilley, destroying or damaging more than 100 homes, shops and other buildings.

Soviet officials at the air show declined to reveal the number of persons aboard the aircraft at the time of the crash. Air show officials said it carried a crew of six.

Sources identified the pilot as Mikhail Kouslov, who recently flew with test pilots aboard the Western world's supersonic airliner, the Concorde, which is being produced jointly by Britain and France.

Teams of French policemen began searching for the plane's flight recorder, the so-called "black box," for clues on the cause of the plane's crash. Control tower workers at Le Bourget airport re-ran communication tapes.

Leading the investigation for the Soviets were Aviation Minister Pyotr V. Dementiev and Alexei A. Tupolev, 47, who helped to design the plane.

The Tupolev 144, which has flown at speeds up to 1,526 miles per hour, and the Concorde have similar body lines.

The Tupolev 144, which made its debut Dec. 31, 1968, one month before the Concorde, had just completed a series of three passes over Le Bourget airport and was banking in preparation for landing when it suddenly appeared to fall.

60 cent raise for millions in hands of Congressmen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A union-backed Democratic bill to raise the minimum wage by 60 cents an hour and to extend its coverage to six million low-paid workers, comes to a vote this week in the House, where a similar proposal was killed last year.

In the Senate, members are expected Tuesday to pass a bill intended to assure that the burden caused by gasoline shortages is shared by all parts of the country — not chiefly the Midwest — and by gasoline stations owned by the big oil companies as well as independent stations, of which 1,020 already have closed because of the shortage.

The Senate bill would establish a mandatory system of gasoline allocation to assure an equitable distribution of any fuels in short supply and would prohibit major refiners from charging independent sellers more than they charge their own outlets.

The minimum wage bill before the House is similar to one which passed the Senate last year but perished in the House. It would raise the wage that must be paid to workers covered from the present $1.60 an hour to $2.20 within a year and would extend coverage to six million jobs now uncovered, including maids and other domestic workers.

On Saturday, AFL-CIO President George Meany wrote all House members asking them to support the Democratic bill.

Nixon should talk openly

STATELINE — Virginia Gov. Linwood Holton, chairman of the 19-member Republican Governors' Assn. meeting at this Lake Tahoe, Nev. resort for the National Governor's Conference, said President Nixon can regain lost public confidence by submitting to regular cross-examination by the press. "The President is going to have to be cross-examined... over a period of weeks or even months. All public officials have to be available to the public," he said.

Watergate link probed

STATELINE — The FBI is investigating a possible link between the Watergate burglary scheme and a break-in at the Dallas home of Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss. The home was broken into shortly before the Democratic convention last July by what appeared to be professionals, Strauss said.

Unemployment improves

WILKES-BARRE — The Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton metropolitan area has been removed from the number of major cities with unemployment of six per cent or more. The Labor Department reported the unemployment dropped to five per cent during May. There are now only 37 major cities with a six per cent unemployment rate. Meanwhile, the jobless rate also dropped below six per cent in Williamsport and the Sayre-Athens-Towanda area.

Legal aid still available

WASHINGTON — Free legal services for the poor is available beyond June 30 while Congress decides whether to transfer the controversial free legal services program to an independent corporation. An OEO director said Congress would be asked to transfer the program to HEW.

Monarchy fading away

ATHENS — Abolition of the Greek monarchy moved forward in Athens, despite King Constantine's assertion that he will return. The Greek Orthodox Church eliminated the singing of the Poly-chronion, the prayer for the longevity and health of the king and his family.

Fill'er up but 90 cents a gallon?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — When his supply of gas dwindled to 200 gallons, service station owner Ken Yano hiked his prices to 90.9 cents a gallon for premium and 85.9 cents for regular. And had some takers.

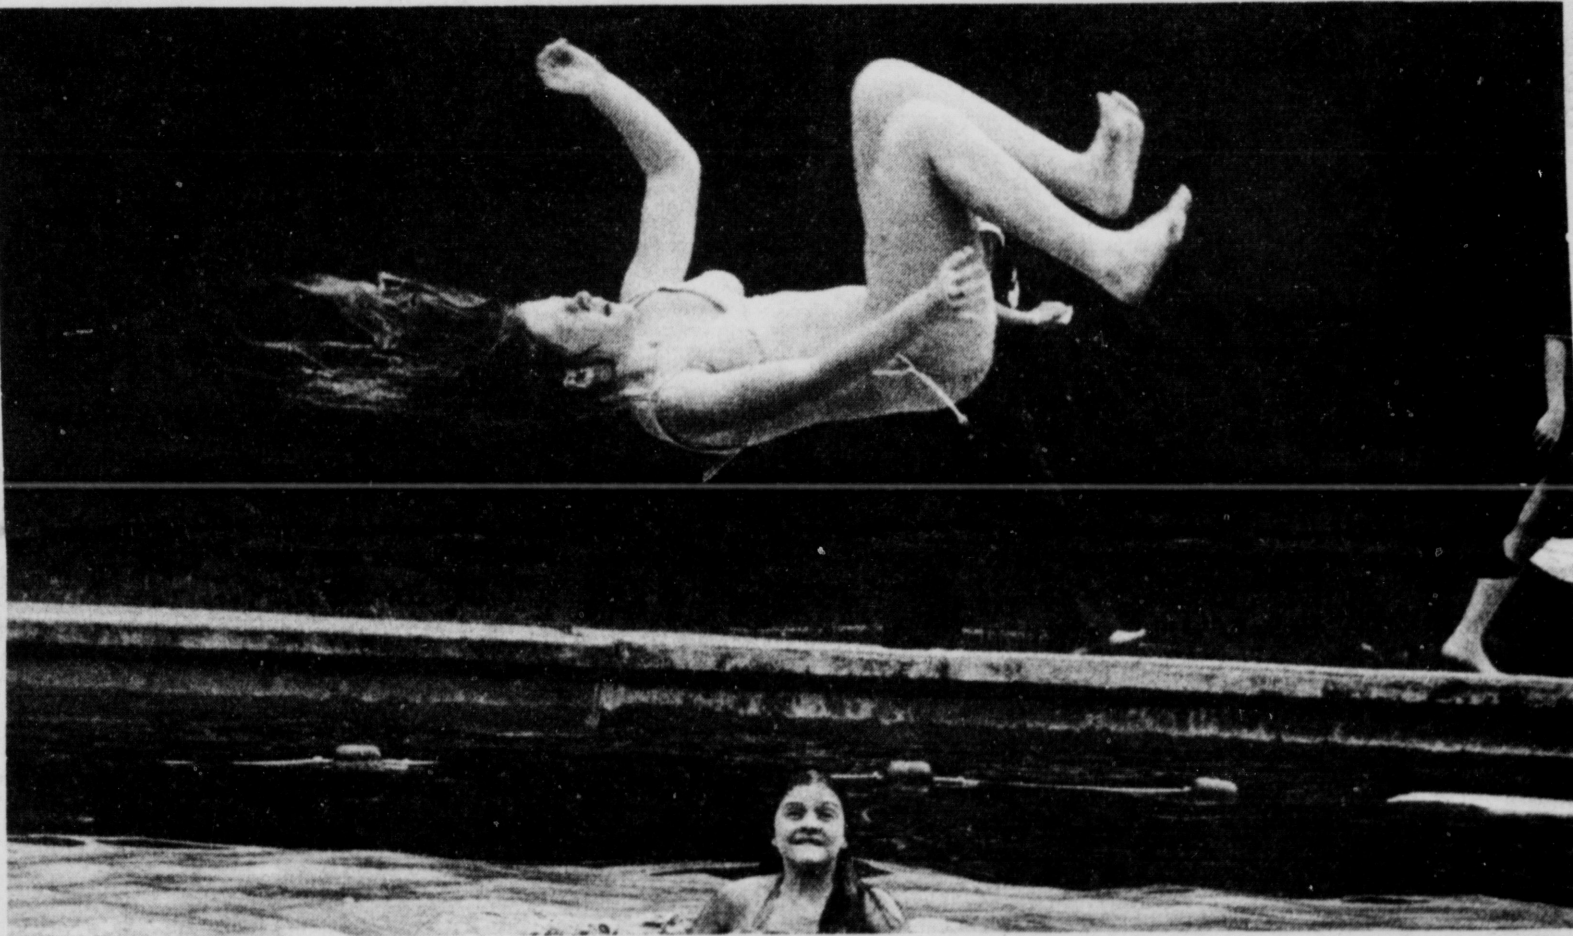

He said he'd rather charge outrageous prices than run out of gas.

"There's nothing worse than pulling into a station and being told they have no gas," Yano said. "At least this way, we'll always have a little for the people who really need it."

He hoped to discourage tourists and casual customers, reserving his gas for local customers with commercial accounts who pay fixed, lower prices. Yano doesn't want to lose their business.

But the high prices didn't discourage everyone.

"One guy took 20 gallons," Yano said. "I asked if he'd seen the sign. He said, 'That's OK, I need the gas.'"

Success salvages project

Spacewalk plans 'look pretty good'

HOUSTON (UPI) — Mission control told the Skylab 1 astronauts Sunday plans were "looking pretty good" for a bold spacewalk within a few days to fix a broken solar cell electrical generator and—as a bonus—look open the broken cover of a key sun-watching telescope.

"Very good," replied Charles "Pete" Conrad, veteran commander of America's first space station crew. "We aim to please. We're more than happy to do anything we can."

Success in the risky walk in space, which could take place as soon as Wednesday, could salvage virtually all of the $2.6 billion Skylab's project's objectives.

Conrad, Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz had just finished a busy 10th day in space during which they flashed home a color telecast panorama of North America from coast to coast and searched from orbit for undiscovered oil and coal fields in Mexico.

In a news conference, meanwhile, a top NASA official said a 10-day extension in the planned four-week Skylab 1 flight would be "very desirable" and looked probable if doctors agreed it would be safe for the astronauts.

Skylab director William C. Schneider also said he would hold an all-day meeting with other top level managers today to make a final determination whether Conrad's crew should venture outside the space station and try to cut or pry open the jammed solar cell power generating wing.

"The primary thing we will be examining tomorrow is the safety aspect of this," Schneider said — "if there are any unusual hazards that we don't wish to accept."

He said if the bold repair work was not attempted—or if it failed — other emergency procedures would be required to let two other crews remain aboard Skylab a full 56 days each later this year.

'Reborn' POW kills self, Viet captive seven years

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI) — An Air Force captain who felt "reborn" when he was released after more than seven years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam but was said to be "despondent" recently was found dead in his in-laws' home here Sunday. Police said he apparently committed suicide.

Capt. Edward Allan Brudno, who would have been 33 years old today, was found with a plastic bag tied around his head with a rope. Seven letters and a will dated March 22 also were found.

Brudno, who was a prisoner from Oct. 18, 1965 when his F-4C plane was shot down until Feb. 11 of this year, thus apparently was the first ex-POW to take his own life.

His death came only two days after the Pentagon's top medical officer had warned that the ex-prisoners were "in worse condition than everyone thought."

Less than four months ago Brudno himself told a crowd that greeted him at Westover Air Base in Massachusetts, "words like unbelievable, exciting, and unreal vividly describe the fantastic excitement of being reborn." At that time Brudno had been described by medical officers who examined him as "very fit."

Mrs. Milton Gittenstein, Brudno's mother-in-law who found his body in a bedroom about 12:30 p.m. EDT, said he had been "despondent," police said. Jack Kaner, Harrison police detective said, "There was no indication but that the death was a suicide."

Brudno was born in Quincy, Mass. He attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass., receiving a B. S. degree in 1963. He entered the Air Force in April 1963 and served in a number of assignments until his assignment to Southeast Asia on temporary duty status in 1965.

He said that Mrs. Brudno was enroute to the Gittenstein home from an undisclosed location.

New conservation ruling might help stem erosion

BRODHEADSVILLE — "Everybody knows that the farmers are the people that have to worry about erosion. Why do I have to have a conservation plan and a permit if I only want to build a house?"

That was the general reaction of residents in the West End and throughout the county when they learned about a new state law which would require anyone, except farmers, who disturbs soil to obtain an erosion permit, a conservation plan, or both.

According to the Soil Conservation Service, however, developments, new homes building of all sorts, and general construction provide a greater erosion crisis situation currently than farms do.

In an interview, SCS District Conservationist Lowell "Skip" Edminster, stressed that sediment is just one of the detrimental by-products of current development that is all too often taken for granted by the average resident.

According to the conservation specialist, sediment affects everyone, because its accumulation from erosion causes harbors, lakes, drainage ditches, streams, roadside ditches and reservoirs to fill up.

It washes away a valuable and almost irreplaceable resource — top soil. Flooding occurs readily when sediment fills up ditches that eventually lose their water carrying capacity.

Trout die because they cannot reproduce in accumulations of silt and sediment and large bodies of water die because of the sediment and organic matter build-up.

Taxes may go up because of the cost of flood damage and filtering out the muddy silt that accumulates in reservoirs. Build-up of silt reduces the capacity of hydroelectric plants to produce electricity which already is in short supply.

Increased taxes are also necessary because sediment has been so bad in some areas of the country that bridges had to be raised to accommodate new high water levels.

The accumulation can be removed from these channels, but according to the SCS, costs for doing so are about 40 cents a cubic yard.

All sediment comes from erosion of some type and misuse of the land. Farmland cultivation, erosion along waterways where trees have been cut down and erosion along roads where there is improper sloping and lack of vegetation, are major contributors to the sediment problem.

Construction sites are highly susceptible to erosion, according to the SCS, because large housing developments may keep an area bare for one to three years. The period of greatest erosion hazard, according to Edminster, lasts three to 12 months.

Industrial and mine wastes also contribute in some spots to sedimentation.

All of these factors, however, result from man's disturbance of the natural cover of trees or grass. Although all the land cannot be returned to its natural cover, the SCS has several constructive suggestions to prevent erosion and sediment.

It suggests contour and terrace farming in many cases, instead of straight row cultivation for farmers. These methods have reduced soil loss by 85 per cent.

The service suggests stabilizing stream channels by rock-rip rapping, jetty construction, planting of willows and other methods.

It suggests that builders leave vegetation in tact until just before construction begins and advises that only a minimum area required for operations be destroyed at one time.

In areas where builders must expose soil for a long time, the SCS suggests temporary covers such as annual grasses, small grains, sod, burlap, mulch, or plastic.

Developers should also be aware that contour diversions can be used to intercept any runoff and channel it to waterways that lead it to safe depositories.

Dams or basins on certain construction sites can prevent some sediments damage.

In conclusion, Edminster pointed out that it was far more costly to remove sediment from roads, harbors and reservoirs than to utilize soil conservation measures initially.

He stressed that erosion sediment can be reduced by up to 90 per cent by conservation methods in many instances and said that every resident — whether he lives on a farm or in the city — will greatly benefit from soil conservation methods, by reduced taxes, reduced costs of flood, electricity and water, and by reduced railway and bus fares.

In addition, conservation measures will promote better health and protect the recreational facilities so valued in Monroe County, he said.

Stream restoration underway

HARRISBURG — Streams damaged by Hurricane Agnes in Pennsylvania are being restored, according to state conservationist Benny Martin of the Soil Conservation Service.

Martin said the service is using federal emergency funds to revegetate streambanks and improve channels destroyed by the flood. Thirty-six counties have now requested technical and financial aid in repairing sections of 131 streams and rivers.

The conservationist reported that special emphasis is being placed on stabilizing streambanks with grasses and legumes. In some streams, flood debris and excess gravel are being removed to prevent flood damages to farmlands, roads, bridges, homes, and public facilities, should another flood occur in the near future.

Close supervision of all earth moving activities by the SCS, as well as mulching and seeding, is reducing stream sedimentation and improving aquatic habitat. All stream restoration work is being done in close cooperation with the Department of Environmental Resources, the Fish Commission, and the local conservation districts.

Locally, Lowell "Skip" Edminster, district conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service, reports that several seeding projects are completed in Carbon County. Stream bank restoration on the Lower Mahoning Creek will be completed barring high waters.

In Monroe County, 13 projects have been planned and work will begin as soon as contracts are awarded and conditions permit.

By MAUREEN RUFÉ

BRODHEADSVILLE — Horror streaked across the faces of two veteran West End farmers at the Effort Diner last week when they suddenly learned that a prankster had the cruel nature to throw a prize hog into a nearby pond.

"Instant suicide," uttered the one retiree, gently sipping his morning cup of coffee. "How long did the old girl live?"

"What a way to go," commented the friend. "How long before she cut her throat?"

The farmers, believing in the West End tradition that hogs will cut their throats by striking them with the sharp points of their cloven front feet if they swim any length of time, assumed the "old girl" died a horrible death.

As it turned out, the hog not only survived, she took readily to the water, and was quite an accomplished swimmer.

The whole situation was reported to be no thing short of a miracle to the farmers.

Because the forelegs of hogs are set closely under their body, the animals generally are bad swimmers to begin with. If the hogs are fat, they can't swim any distance and are likely to scratch themselves with their front hoofs and then bleed to death.

West End wanderings

As it turned out, the prize "victim" thrown in the pond was just slim enough to enjoy the water and escape without any consequences.

As the local experts reviewed the incident with awe, they revealed the hog swimming theory actually developed in a place other than the West End.

In the days of the old sailing vessels, according to the story tellers, hogs would always be carried on board the ships to be used as a compass in case of emergencies.

If the vessel was lost or out of sight of land, the hog would be thrown into the water. Instinctively, according to the two gentlemen, the hog would swim toward the nearest land and the entire ship would be saved.

Accordingly, however, the hog had to be picked up immediately, or it would cut its throat and never be able again to save the ship and its crew.

Far be it from me to refute such a time-honored theory, but I doubt that this summer if I ever decide to go water skiing out at the Beltzville Dam, that I will ever take a hog along, just in case I get lost.

The whole idea would be most impractical, of course, because at that park, land is always in sight. If you own a boat and you're planning on a trip on a large body of water, however, you may want to start raising hogs as a sideline.

According to the West End farmers, there's no telling when one might come in handy!

20th century awaits county

Arthur A. Weglein Jr. used one of our favorite phrases Thursday. "Monroe County," he said, "is going to be dragged — kicking and screaming — into the 20th century whether it likes it or not."

Weglein, executive director of Stroud Manor, a county extended care facility, was talking about the growing need for health care, especially with the imminent completion of Interstate Rte. 80 and the growth it will bring. But he could as well have been talking about sewerage, water, solid waste, community planning or a host of areas in which the county's needs are going to change dramatically from the experience of the last 50 years.

Weglein also noted that indecision on the part of county officials is costing the county money. We have gone over that ground before, and couldn't agree more. Inflation hasn't been stilled yet, and the longer you wait before acting, the more it is going to cost.

A decision on what to do about the partially obsolete Pleasant Valley Manor has been pending for months now. Similar decisions have been pending about the county courthouse and the jail. (Sheriff Forrest Sebring got into that act by letting it be known he wasn't going to do anything about that facility until commissioners acted first. That hasn't happened yet, despite years and years of grand jury and state recommendations that a new facility be built.)

Those buildings and institutions that have been serving the county for decades are wearing out or have worn out through sheer numbers of years. They no longer are able to fill the needs of the county and its citizens. And yet nothing is being done other than study after study being commissioned.

As we wrote in an editorial a couple of weeks ago, time is a-wastin'. The longer we wait, the more it will cost to start hauling the county into the latter third of the 20th century — kicking and screaming or not.

Gas shortage here

The Poconos has the reputation of being at least two years behind the more populous areas of the nation in responding to economic ups and downs and associated phenomena. But not where the gasoline shortage is concerned.

That particular drought is hitting the nation as a whole, and all at once. Area service stations are either setting limits on how much gas they're selling or closing earlier — or even closing down altogether on weekends.

Whether the situation has been forced by major oil companies or not, as Sen. Henry M. Jackson has charged, it is here, and the outlook for the traditionally heavier summer traffic isn't good at all.

What's the solution? Some advisers suggest slowing down as one way to cut down on gas mileage. Others advise not using the car for those short hops that you can either walk or forget entirely. Yet others urge higher prices as a way to cut down on consumption and simultaneously encourage the oil companies to search even more energetically for undiscovered fuel reserves.

Whatever is done, it won't come in time to help out this summer. And maybe not even for next summer. And that is just one more proof of the adage that a stitch in time saves nine. We didn't awaken to the threat of fuel shortages soon enough, and when we were alerted, the powers in government fended off a decision because of timidity in the face of a difficult task. And so here we are, all revved up, so to speak, and nowhere to go.

Back seat driver

Is Rocky the man for '76?

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — The next Republican presidential nominee may well be right here in the high-stake climate of Nevada at the 65th National Governors' Conference.

In the view of many of the governors, you can name him and he would be — not surprisingly — Nelson Rockefeller, the most elected state executive in the nation.

There is considerable agreement among Democrats and Republicans here on three things:

1—They would like to see a governor head at least one of the two presidential tickets in 1976. It has been a long drought. No Democratic governor has been elected President since F.D.R. in 1932. No Republican governor has been elected President since Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio 97 years ago.

2—The governors who are here to discuss both policy and politics are almost unanimously convinced that this time, unlike 1968, there will be no weakening or wavering in Rockefeller's determination to go after the '76 nomination.

No comment yet

I get no different impression from Rockefeller himself, although his public stance does not go beyond the statement that he "is keeping all options open." He can't say more than that until he is re-elected for an unprecedented fifth term as governor of New York. If he is defeated, he will be out of contention.

3—While no bets are being taken here, the consensus is that Rockefeller has better than a good chance to get the '76 nomination. The speculative field presently is comprised of our leading contenders — Nelson Rockefeller, Vice President Spiro Agnew, former Texas Governor John B. Connally and Ronald Reagan, governor of California.

Here is why many of the governors feel that Rocky's future on the national scene is still ahead of him:

One of his possible liabilities — he will be 67 in '76 — could become a political asset since mature experience may be just what the voters will most want in the White House.

Jack Anderson

The kiss-and-tell caper

WASHINGTON — Topping all the other tactics used against the Democrats in the 1972 campaign, call girls were recruited to romance Democratic leaders and, between kisses, to wheedle political secrets from them at their Miami convention.

Senate investigators learned about this unique undercover operation from no less than ex-Attorney General John Mitchell. A summary of his confidential confession describes a meeting with Watergate ringleader G. Gordon Liddy at the Justice Department on January 27, 1972.

"Liddy arrived," states the summary, "with massive charts of an intelligence gathering program which was a huge structural operation with people in different places with different code names and included, among other things, the use of electronic eavesdropping devices, a call girl ring for the Democratic National Convention and other intelligence gathering operations."

Mitchell claimed he was "horrified by the magnitude and the budget" of the Liddy proposal. He, therefore, "directed Liddy to take his charts and burn them." White House counsel John Dean, who also sat in on the session, agreed with Mitchell that the scheme "far exceeded anything of rationality."

Liddy came back on February 4, according to the summary, "with another intelligence gathering plan but this time without charts. Dean was present and informed Liddy that it was an insult to the Attorney General to bring up matters like this."

The Republican candidate will have to be "Mr. Clean" himself. Rockefeller has been untouched by Watergate.

He has proved to be the most durable and most electable political leader the Republican Party possesses.

He is unscarred by controversy over Vietnam.

With the nation increasingly preoccupied with domestic problems, Rockefeller's long experience as governor of the second most populous state in the Union is more than ordinarily pertinent.

Rocky is not a political loner, not a leader above the partisan battle as was President Eisenhower. He has built a strong party organization in his state and has demonstrated his vote-drawing coattails by enabling the GOP, which is but one of four major parties in New York, to control both houses of the state legislature.

Finally, Rockefeller has obviously moved nearer to the center of his own party nationally. He is sensitive to social needs and is a strong law-and-order governor. His leadership produced a tough new drug law which has brought him substantial conservative support.

No shoo-in

Everyone here believes that there will be a vigorous contest for the Republican nomination. There is no evidence that Agnew intends to allow himself to be easily shunted aside. He is not tainted by Watergate and he is widely esteemed by party workers across the country.

If Reagan runs successfully either for governor or U.S. senator next year, he will remain a contender.

Most politicians, including governors here, tend to feel that John Connally cannot rise to the top of the Republican Party in one leap without decisive support from President Nixon. They doubt that Mr. Nixon will be in a good position to provide that support with the Watergate cloud hanging over the Administration.

If the President tries to support Connally over Agnew — and fails — Rockefeller's position will be enhanced.

But Liddy apparently was undeterred and his scheme strangely survived. By Mitchell's account, he was relaxing in Florida from the rigors of the IIT hearings when campaign director Jeb Magruder showed up with a paper outlining "an intelligence operation which he went through briefly and which included electronic surveillance."

"Mitchell told him," continues the summary, "he didn't want to hear anything of this type, and there was no question in Mitchell's mind that Magruder left Key Biscayne fully understanding Mitchell's position on electronic surveillance. Mitchell cannot understand how Magruder could have conceived that he had authority to commence such an operation."

The operation, presumably, included the kiss-and-tell project. Investigators have confirmed that call girls were recruited but have been unable to determine whether they were actually used.

'Gemstone'

During the confidential interrogation by Senate investigators, Mitchell also denied published reports that he received summaries of the Watergate wiretaps under the code name "Gemstone." "The first time he ever heard of Gemstone," says the summary, "was in Jack Anderson's column." (Our story said the Gemstone reports were submitted to Magruder.)

After the Waterbuggers were arrested, Mitchell said "there were continual meetings both at the White House and CRP (campaign committee) concerning Watergate."

The Hamilton Township Planning Commission, as well as Solicitor Samuel Newman, should be commended for the expedient and fair manner in which the board handled its first subdivision violation.

The situation in question, which concerned a mobile home park located at the Saylorburg ballfield and owned by Harold Barthold, was first brought to the attention of the planners a little more than a month ago by concerned neighbors.

The commission gave the matter their immediate attention and tried to remedy the situation by letter, realizing that the Hamilton subdivision ordinance was new and it was the commission's responsibility to educate the public as to its use, rather than merely set an example of the first violator of the new code.

After some communication had transpired between Newman and Barthold's lawyer, William C. Fulmer, Jr., it was evident, however, that the question was legal in nature and would have to be settled between the two attorneys.

In an attempt to keep the public informed as to their thinking, the planners called a special session for Tuesday night to rule on the question.

They not only invited the Hamilton supervisors, and Barthold and his attorney to the session — they actually had the consideration to invite concerned neighbors and the press to the meeting.

This, in itself, is a refreshing change from the increasing tendency of local West End boards to settle controversial matters in private executive sessions where neither the public nor the press can view the proceedings.

The Hamilton commission, in comparison, welcomed the public to view their thinking on the situation. It came as no surprise that the entire question of violation was answered in a mere 20 minutes, with no long emotional soliloquies espoused by neighbors and no breakdown in the order of the meeting.

Newman, having made a personal site inspection of the mobile home park called first on the Bartholds to explain what development had been done at the ballpark and what their estimation of the situation was.

Extracting a series of verifications from Fulmer and the Bartholds as to existing conditions at the ballfield, Newman was quickly able to conclude that trailers located at the site did, in fact, constitute a mobile home park.

He suggested that when a mobile home was moved to the site earlier this year, the action constituted further development of the park.

Since no proper plans were submitted to the commission regarding the development, the trailer was in violation, and the home had to be moved, according to Newman.

Fulmer, trying to make an emotional plea to the planners by asking the latest trailer resident to relate "all that she had gone through" waiting for a decision, finally admitted he could not refute Newman's conclusions.

The question was settled then and there and there was no need to delve into the other emotional concerns of residents regarding the trailer being too close to the road, the trailer being located on less than the required 10-acres of land or the trailer being an "eye sore."

In less than two months the violation was investigated and alleviated by the Hamilton planners.

At the same time, the commission gave fair consideration to the situation and held a public meeting on the question for all to hear.

Other West End planning commissions should follow the example of the Hamilton board in expediting violations and making their thinking on the situations a matter of public record.

Expressing himself to a tee

At this time, 15,000,000 addicted golfers disappear on Saturdays and Sundays. A month ago, John Ross, editor of Golf magazine, published a short lexicon of golf terms which I wrote for the edification of all hackers. Fellow sufferers, read it and weep:

Gimmie: An uneasy agreement between players to avoid the terror of putting.

Stymie: Any living thing that grows 30 feet tall between the time you hit the ball and it stops behind the object.

Ball: A white dimpled sphere guaranteed to remain round for two holes of play. Also, a successful flirtation with a lady golfer.

Eagle: Two strokes under par, as a hole in one on a par 3. Also, a large angry-looking bird that does not play.

Hole: A small round excavation placed in an inaccessible part of the green, surmounted by a staff and a pennant. It is seen clearly by the player, seldom by the ball.

Press: Something a tailor does to a suit of clothes. Also the predilection of the born loser to double the bet.

Trap: A large area of strategically placed sand. Also what the golfer opens when he finds his ball in the bottom of a footprint. It requires two strokes to get out of a trap, one of which is cerebral.

Relax: Something the intelligent golfer never does. The game is designed to build blood pressure, anxiety and frustration.

Handicap: A figure which, when added to 72, then subtracting one-third for false information, approximates the score of the duffer. An honest handicap is alien to the game.

Free lift: First down. Also what happens to girl hitch-hikers when dirty old men drive by.

Ground under repair: To the duffer, the whole golf course.

Water hazard: Lakes and creeks where ambitious boys retrieve golf balls and sell them to their rightful owners at half price.

Fairway: A green undulating bowling alley.

Club: One of fourteen permissible concealed weapons. The player must learn to embrace it in a double handshake no matter how many times it betrays him.

Lie: Where the ball reposes after being nudged by a foot. Also the number uttered by a golfer when he holes out.

Good miss: Usually a wood shot that shears every other blade of grass en route to oblivion. In addition, an attractive young girl bending forward to putt.

Lip: A place for growing a mustache. An overhanging edge of a bunker. The place where all good putts go to die. What you get from your golfing partner all day.

Starting time: A double error on the part of the country club and the golfer. Akin to what happens in a doctor's waiting room. The first embrace on the back seat of an automobile.

Shank: What is left on Monday of Sunday's ham. An unconscious trick shot with a golf ball.

Hole high: Right club, wrong direction. Head: A roundish object that the golfer and the criminal maintain in a downward position. Something neither uses.

Blast: Sand shot from a bunker. A British expletive as a result of the result.

Slice: The addition of 50 per cent of all golfers who try to hit a straight ball.

Hook: The addition of the other half.

Pro: A doctor who assures you that he can cure in 30 minutes an affliction it has taken years to acquire.

Green: Mecca. Something which, having taken three shots to travel 400 yards, requires three more to move 40 feet. Something hackers hand to hustlers.

Tee: A storm cellar for insects when the golfer is about to hit.

Locker room: A sanctuary for ugly nudists. The only place where the golfer is assured of a good lie...

Touch and Go

The expression "touch and go," meaning a narrow escape or a brush with disaster, originated in the days of the horse-drawn coaches and wagons.

A coachman in a hurry sometimes came upon a slow moving coach or wagon in the road. The driver of the slower vehicle usually pulled his vehicle as far to one side of the road as he could so as to let the coach pass.

The roads were narrow, and sometimes the wheels of the two vehicles touched or scraped, but without enough impact to wreck the vehicles.

Such a scraping of wheels was described as "touch and go."

20th century awaits county

Arthur A. Weglein Jr. used one of our favorite phrases Thursday. "Monroe County," he said, "is going to be dragged — kicking and screaming — into the 20th century whether it likes it or not."

Weglein, executive director of Stroud Manor, a county extended care facility, was talking about the growing need for health care, especially with the imminent completion of Interstate Rte. 80 and the growth it will bring. But he could as well have been talking about sewerage, water, solid waste, community planning or a host of areas in which the county's needs are going to change dramatically from the experience of the last 50 years.

Weglein also noted that indecision on the part of county officials is costing the county money. We have gone over that ground before, and couldn't agree more. Inflation hasn't been stilled yet, and the longer you wait before acting, the more it is going to cost.

A decision on what to do about the partially obsolete Pleasant Valley Manor has been pending for months now. Similar decisions have been pending about the county courthouse and the jail. (Sheriff Forrest Sebring got into that act by letting it be known he wasn't going to do anything about that facility until commissioners acted first. That hasn't happened yet, despite years and years of grand jury and state recommendations that a new facility be built.)

Those buildings and institutions that have been serving the county for decades are wearing out or have worn out through sheer numbers of years. They no longer are able to fill the needs of the county and its citizens. And yet nothing is being done other than study after study being commissioned.

As we wrote in an editorial a couple of weeks ago, time is a-wastin'. The longer we wait, the more it will cost to start hauling the county into the latter third of the 20th century — kicking and screaming or not.

Gas shortage here

The Poconos has the reputation of being at least two years behind the more populous areas of the nation in responding to economic ups and downs and associated phenomena. But not where the gasoline shortage is concerned.

That particular drought is hitting the nation as a whole, and all at once. Area service stations are either setting limits on how much gas they're selling or closing earlier — or even closing down altogether on weekends.

Whether the situation has been forced by major oil companies or not, as Sen. Henry M. Jackson has charged, it is here, and the outlook for the traditionally heavier summer traffic isn't good at all.

What's the solution? Some advisers suggest slowing down as one way to cut down on gas mileage. Others advise not using the car for those short hops that you can either walk or forget entirely. Yet others urge higher prices as a way to cut down on consumption and simultaneously encourage the oil companies to search even more energetically for undiscovered fuel reserves.

Whatever is done, it won't come in time to help out this summer. And maybe not even for next summer. And that is just one more proof of the adage that a stitch in time saves nine. We didn't awaken to the threat of fuel shortages soon enough, and when we were alerted, the powers in government fended off a decision because of timidity in the face of a difficult task. And so here we are, all revved up, so to speak, and nowhere to go.

Is Rocky the man for '76?

LAKE TAHOE, Nev. — The next Republican presidential nominee may well be right here in the high-stake climate of Nevada at the 65th National Governors' Conference.

In the view of many of the governors, you can name him and he would be — not surprisingly — Nelson Rockefeller, the most elected state executive in the nation.

There is considerable agreement among Democrats and Republicans here on three things:

1—They would like to see a governor head at least one of the two presidential tickets in 1976. It has been a long drought. No Democratic governor has been elected President since F.D.R. in 1932. No Republican governor has been elected President since Rutherford B. Hayes of Ohio 97 years ago.

2—The governors who are here to discuss both policy and politics are almost unanimously convinced that this time, unlike 1968, there will be no weakening or wavering in Rockefeller's determination to go after the '76 nomination.

No comment yet

I get no different impression from Rockefeller himself, although his public stance does not go beyond the statement that he "is keeping all options open." He can't say more than that until he is re-elected for an unprecedented fifth term as governor of New York. If he is defeated, he will be out of contention.

3—While no bets are being taken here, the consensus is that Rockefeller has better than a good chance to get the '76 nomination. The speculative field presently is comprised of our leading contenders — Nelson Rockefeller, Vice President Spiro Agnew, former Texas Governor John B. Connally and Ronald Reagan, governor of California.

Here is why many of the governors feel that Rocky's future on the national scene is still ahead of him:

One of his possible liabilities — he will be 67 in '76 — could become a political asset since mature experience may be just what the voters will most want in the White House.

The Republican candidate will have to be "Mr. Clean" himself. Rockefeller has been untouchable by Watergate.

He has proved to be the most durable and most electable political leader the Republican Party possesses.

He is unscarred by controversy over Vietnam.

With the nation increasingly preoccupied with domestic problems, Rockefeller's long experience as governor of the second most populous state in the Union is more than ordinarily pertinent.

Rocky is not a political loner, not a leader above the partisan battle as was President Eisenhower. He has built a strong party organization in his state and has demonstrated his vote-drawing coattails by enabling the GOP, which is but one of four major parties in New York, to control both houses of the state legislature.

Finally, Rockefeller has obviously moved nearer to the center of his own party nationally. He is sensitive to social needs and is a strong law-and-order governor. His leadership produced a tough new drug law which has brought him substantial conservative support.

No shoe-in

Everyone here believes that there will be a vigorous contest for the Republican nomination. There is no evidence that Agnew intends to allow himself to be easily shunted aside. He is not tainted by Watergate and he is widely esteemed by party workers across the country.

If Reagan runs successfully either for governor or U.S. senator next year, he will remain a contender.

Most politicians, including governors here, tend to feel that John Connally cannot rise to the top of the Republican Party in one leap without decisive support from President Nixon. They doubt that Mr. Nixon will be in a good position to provide that support with the Watergate cloud hanging over the Administration.

If the President tries to support Connally over Agnew — and fails — Rockefeller's position will be enhanced.

The kiss-and-tell caper

WASHINGTON — Topping all the other tactics used against the Democrats in the 1972 campaign, call girls were recruited to romance Democratic leaders and, between kisses, to wheedle political secrets from them at their Miami convention.

Senate investigators learned about this unique undercover operation from no less than ex-Attorney General John Mitchell. A summary of his confidential confession describes a meeting with Watergate ringleader G. Gordon Liddy at the Justice Department on January 27, 1972.

"Liddy arrived," states the summary, "with massive charts of an intelligence gathering program which was a huge structural operation with people in different places with different code names and included, among other things, the use of electronic eavesdropping devices, a call girl ring for the Democratic National Convention and other intelligence gathering operations."

Mitchell claimed he was "horrified by the magnitude and the budget" of the Liddy proposal. He, therefore, "directed Liddy to take his charts and burn them." White House counsel John Dean, who also sat in on the session, agreed with Mitchell that the scheme "far exceeded anything of rationality."

Liddy came back on February 4, according to the summary, "with another intelligence gathering plan but this time without charts. Dean was present and informed Liddy that it was an insult to the Attorney General to bring up matters like this."

But Liddy apparently was undeterred and his scheme strangely survived. By Mitchell's account, he was relaxing in Florida from the rigors of the ITT hearings when campaign director Jeb Magruder showed up with a paper outlining "an intelligence operation which he went through briefly and which included electronic surveillance."

"Mitchell told him," continues the summary, "he didn't want to hear anything of this type, and there was no question in Mitchell's mind that Magruder left Key Biscayne fully understanding Mitchell's position on electronic surveillance. Mitchell cannot understand how Magruder could have conceived that he had authority to commence such an operation."

The operation, presumably, included the kiss-and-tell project. Investigators have confirmed that call girls were recruited but have been unable to determine whether they were actually used.

'Gemstone'

During the confidential interrogation by Senate investigators, Mitchell also denied published reports that he received summaries of the Watergate wiretaps under the code name "Gemstone." "The first time he ever heard of Gemstone," says the summary, "was in Jack Anderson's column." (Our story said the Gemstone reports were submitted to Magruder.)

After the Waterbuggers were arrested, Mitchell said "there were continual meetings both at the White House and CRP (campaign committee) concerning Watergate."

Gas tax may break highway bottleneck

By JOHN L. MOORE
Ottaway News Service
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — An extra penny in state gasoline tax may well be the solution to a stall which has caught the $400 million highways appropriations bill in a three-way bottleneck between the Senate, the House and the governor's office.

The bill started out in the Senate last January with the senators voting unanimously to approve $492 million in long term bonds to finance major highway construction and road repair projects across the state.

But House Republicans balked when the bill reached their chamber, and the House voted along party lines to strip the repair funds from the bill. The House GOP wants the repair work done but disagrees with the Senate and Gov. Shapp on how to pay for it.

In fact, key Republicans are balking a House bill put in by the chairman of the House Transportation Committee to finance the repair projects by means of an additional one cent state tax on gas.

The House passed the appropriations bill — minus the repair funds — a few weeks ago, but the Senate apparently had some thinking to do when the amended bill returned from concurrence.

The bill was on the Senate calendar last week, but the senators whose districts stand to reap substantial benefits when the bill finally passes, say they expect a compromise to be worked out in the next week or two.

Sen. Franklin L. Kury, the Northumberland Democrat vitally interested in a new limited access bypass linking Northumberland and Snyder Counties, is hoping for a quick solution because "every week is another week's delay" for the bypass.

Kury sees a possible solution not in the form of the penny tax House Republicans want and not in the form of the 30-year bonds the Shapp administration wants, but in the guise of 10-year bonds to fund the repairs.

House Republicans reject the 30-year bonds as too costly; and administration Democrats seemingly reject the extra gas tax because the gubernatorial election is only a year away.

The 10-year bonding would be "my inclination," Kury says and adds he expects the Senate to non-concur with the House version of the bill. This would send both chambers to a conference table to thrash out a compromise.

Sen. R. Budd Dwyer, a Crawford County Republican who is satisfying a campaign promise by getting Mercer County a Rt. 80 Interchange at Grove City, agrees with Kury that the Senate probably will non-concur on the bill.

The Senate is unhappy that the House has jeopardized the repair money and is, Dwyer explains, "very reluctant to move on it because that would completely seal off any chance for the maintenance funds."

Dwyer and Kury both voted for lumping repair funds in with construction money in January, and Dwyer, like Kury, now indicates willingness to change his position.

Road repairs are crucial, Dwyer says. "Up in this area particularly, the roads are absolutely atrocious," he says, and adds "I'll vote for the gas tax" if that's what it takes to insure funds for the repairs.

A House Republican who belongs to the transportation committee predicts the compromise will be the gas tax. "My speculation," says Rep. Roy W. Wilt, "is they go with the one cent tax and the governor will blame us for the tax."

Wilt says all sides are eager to get a compromise "worked out" and says "once the deal is made, it'll go. I think everybody is aware that something has to move, that something has to give."

But the Mercer County representative appears convinced that House Republicans will stick with the gas tax proposal.

The bill before the Senate contains some 8.33 million for proposed highway construction projects in Pike, Wayne and Northampton Counties — but nothing for Monroe.

Monroe did have $999,000 in proposed repair projects in the bill originally but these funds were included in the $4.18 million proposed for repair projects in all four counties which were cut from the bill. House Republicans scrubbed them when they deleted $104 million in statewide repair projects.

HARRISBURG — The good guys and bad guys are battling over taxes and tax breaks in Pennsylvania's House of Representatives. But it's impossible to tell who's who.

The latest flap began last week when House Republicans unveiled a three-pronged tax relief package guaranteeing most wage earners and annual $46 savings on the state income tax.

This kind of talk has to have eager listeners in the hinterlands and House Democrats have been howling ever since — and shouting foul to boot because they say the GOP is crying wolf.

Read the press releases:

"... A $2,000 across-the-board exclusion of income used for tax computation purposes not only will eliminate thousands of Pennsylvanians from the income tax rolls but (will) bring on an immediate reduction of $46 annually in the tax bills of those still on it."

That is how the Republicans touted their package at the unveiling but House Democrats were quick to respond:

"... Let's not kid the public in an effort to win political points... A long line of Supreme Court decisions have held that tax measures similar to the Republican proposal have been found to violate the uniformity clause of the state constitution."

This release quoted Herb Fineman, the Democratic floor leader in the House.

Fineman pointed out that the Democrats too want a tax break for the people, but the Republicans said their relief was more than the Democrats wanted to give.

According to the GOP, the Democratic proposal to cut the state income tax rate from 2.3 to 2.1 per cent is adequate and "on an income of $10,000, the (Democratic proposed) tax rate cut would amount to only $20 a year as compared with the $46 under our proposal."

Republicans tie their tax relief bill directly to their bid to keep a ceiling on state spending during the 1973-74 fiscal year. "The House leadership is firmly convinced that a tax relief program... can only succeed if the Democrat-controlled Senate and the governor join in keeping the lid on state spending."

But Democrats respond in part by linking the GOP tax plan with a possible "increase in county taxes." If, says Fineman, the Republicans "fail to fund a $31 million program" proposed by the governor to help county governments pay for local court costs, the costs will still have to be paid.

The program is intended to "help counties to either reduce or at least not increase local property taxes," Fineman says. His argument is clear: the Republicans will let you have your money only long enough for the county governments to take it.

In turn, Republicans say their package would give business as well as individuals a break, but most importantly would be the relief for low income people: "The House Republican leadership has decided to press for an immediate tax relief program which... will eliminate thousands of poor, the elderly and working students from the income tax rolls."

Because many of the poor, the old, and the students don't make $2,000 a year, they won't be taxed at all, the Republicans say.

But the Democrats says the courts will declare the $2,000 exemption unconstitutional and the people won't get any break at all. Only business will.

And other provisions of the GOP bill, the Democrats charge, will "give corporations in Pennsylvania a staggering $544 million windfall in tax reduction in 1973." This is because, according to Fineman, the Republicans left a loophole in their bill "through which the corporations can slip without paying any income taxes during the current year."

So it goes.

Weekly roll call

How your legislators voted

Ottaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In roll call votes last week, the Senate defeated two amendments to a supplemental appropriations bill which would have continued funding for U. S. air combat activities in Cambodia and Laos.

The Senate also defeated an attempt to restore $16 million for construction of United States Information Agency (USIA) radio facilities before authorizing fiscal 1974 funds for that agency.

In the only contested House vote last week, a bill authorizing continued federal aid for emergency medical services was approved 261-92 despite White House opposition.

The Senate: An amendment which would have permitted U. S. bombing to continue in Laos and Cambodia if directed solely against North Vietnamese forces, defeated 17-63.

Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., yes; and Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., no.

An amendment which would have continued funding for U. S. air combat activities if the President determined that North Vietnam is not making an accounting, to the best of its ability, of U. S. military personnel missing in actions, defeated 25-56.

Scott, yes and Schweiker, no.

An amendment to restore $16 million for construction of USIA radio facilities, defeated 31-48.

Scott, yes; Schweiker, yes; The House:

A bill authorizing assistance for planning, development and initial operation, research and training projects for emergency medical services systems, passed 261-92.

Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, yes and Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-15, yes.

Senators oppose tip tax

Ottaway News Service
Harrisburg Bureau

HARRISBURG — At least one state Senator is predicting victory in an obscure effort to keep Revenue Secretary Robert P. Kane from dunning waitresses with a tip tax.

Sen. R. Budd Dwyer (R-Crawford), said Friday that opponents hope to thwart Kane's intention to begin collecting six per cent sales tax on all gratuities paid for services performed in conjunction with the sale of food, beverages and hotel accommodations.

While Senators have introduced legislation to prohibit taxing gratuities, Dwyer said the state attorney general is expected to rule that the revenue department cannot impose a sales tax on tips, Dwyer said.

is sunday school out-of-date?

It's never out-of-date to understand God, and man, and the true nature of the universe.

This understanding is what young people up to the age of 20 gain in our Sunday School.

They're taught a warm and practical Christianity, and how to apply it to everyday problems. And as they study the Bible, together with Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, they're preparing to help solve the world's problems in the most forward-looking, fresh, and effective way.

Should you use sugar substitutes? Should others be prevented from using them? Before you reach a decision based on headlines, let's take a closer look at the story, particularly the role of the sugar industry.

Such headlines as "Cancer Links Bring Pressure for Saccharin Ban" strike fear in the hearts not only of the occasional diet-soda drinker, but diabetics and others on sugar-free diets as well. All no-calorie sweeteners in this country are based on saccharin. Moreover, if you can't use sugar and if saccharin is banned, there simply is no other substitute now available.

The story closely parallels the cyclamate issue of a few years back. The government was forced to ban cyclamate sweeteners after studies — paid for by the sugar industry — showed that it was possible to induce cancer in test animals by feeding massive doses. Most medical observers saw little probability that cyclamate could cause cancer in humans.

Nevertheless, the ban was required by the Delaney Amendment, which permits no leeway for scientific evaluation: if an item can be shown to induce cancer — at any dose level — it must be outlawed. (This law, incidentally, does not cover cigarettes.)

Despite strong opposition to the inflexibility of the Delaney Amendment, there was no outraged battle to save cyclamates. After all, there was another sweetener on the market whose safety was considered unquestioned.

In use 80 years

The other sweetener, of course, was saccharin, in use for more than 80 years with no evidence connecting it with cancer. In its 1970 report on saccharin's safety, the National Academy of Science cited heavy use of saccharin in Europe during the sugar-rationed war years and a recent mortality study of American diabetics showing cept on June 6 before the game night.

A meeting of the participating members on the fair will be held June 18 at 7:30 at the Alpine Pub.

With money-raising in its future, the club devoted its May meeting to spending money they had previously made. Joan Rinehimer presented a check for $121.94 to the scoutmaster and scouts for their assistance in the paper drive.

They also voted a contribution to the Cancer Research Fund and to three families in the area. It was reported that the Bike-a-thon for the Pennsylvania Assn. for Retarded Children had raised $360.

The club voted to install a drainage system for the sink at the Blakeslee Community Center and the conservation committee has painted the picnic tables and benches at the Pocono Pines Blanche Price Memorial Park.

Linda Wildrick is handling publicity while Marie Smith is on maternity leave. Mary Shiner volunteered to replace Grace Wildrick at the state convention in Harrisburg since Mrs. William Wildrick was in the hospital.

Plans were also made for a trip to New York on Oct. 6 to see the play "Seesaw."

Bible school

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Salvation Army will conduct its annual Vacation Bible School from June 4 through June 14 Monday through Friday 6 to 8 p.m. It is open to all children ages 3 to 14. Registration can be made at 6 p.m. Monday at the Citadel, 226 Washington St.

Calorie-conscious cooking

What's behind scare Saccharin headlines

no increase in cancer among saccharin users. Many use saccharin as a total sugar replacement all their lives.

But the cyclamate ban was to be an incomplete victory for the sugar interests. The diet industry did not die. Saccharin took cyclamate's place: its use grew to 4½ million pounds a year, up from 20,000 pounds in the mid-1950s.

So the sugar industry sponsored other studies. In one, saccharin pellets were implanted directly into test animals, but the tests were ruled irrelevant because many substances can cause cancer in that manner. However, they did achieve some success with feeding studies: 80 rats were fed massive amounts — the equivalent of 875 bottles of diet soda a day, every day of their lives — more than 100 times the amount normally used by humans. And 12 of the 80 rats succeeded in developing tumors.

Spurred on by these reports, the FDA conducted tests at even higher levels, 150 times the normal daily use. In the FDA study three out of 48 rats developed tumors: "Presumptive evidence" that high doses of saccharin can cause tumors, but still not in conclusive evidence of a saccharin-cancer link.

The study did, however, induce headlines. But these facets of the story are frequently overlooked:

* The FDA is not sure the tumors are cancer. FDA Bureau of Foods Chief Virgil O. Wodicka stated that "the first question is: 'Is it really cancer?'"

* "Second, if it is cancer, did saccharin induce it?" That's the next question, according to Wodicka. It may have been the irritation of such massive doses. Or, a contaminant in the type of saccharin: the chemical "OTS," no longer used in American saccharin production.

* Also the tumors showed up near the end of the animals' life span when many animals, humans included, develop tumors. (However, there were

Eagles Auxiliary adds up gifts for past year

STROUDSBURG — A report on money raised by the Eagles Ladies Auxiliary for organizations during the year was given at the May meeting.

They contributed to the Max Bear Heart Fund, Cancer, Salvation Army flood relief; Reeders Trainable Center; Home on the Range for boys; Golden Eagle, Jimmy Durante Children's Fund, and visited the Veterans Hospital at Wilkes-Barre. They also purchased dishes for the club.

Three new members were welcomed, Shirley Hutchen, proposed by Joan Wilson; Ella May Fredricks, proposed by Mary Jane Strunk; and Beverly Jean Augustinski, proposed by Bertha Smith. Donna Burks asked for pictures or items of interest for the scrap book.

Following the meeting a merchandise party was held and refreshments were served. Money for merchandise is due Mary Jane Strunk by June 26.

The next meeting will be held June 12 at 8 p.m. and will feature installation of officers.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — CRITIC AT THE WATERGATE DRAMA: The Watergate Show fascinates all; and it has its specific showbiz side: everyone concerned is "on," performing; the Senators all are up for reelection, the witnesses Method-acting to charm and be persuasive. There are villains and character men and a Mr. Deeds, an Oriental character actor and assorted personalities straight from Central Political Casting.

Sen. Sam Ervin is the jolly avuncular chairman, sympathetic, charming, occasionally funny, perceptive, definitely strong; very Lewis Stone.

No Mickey Rooney has popped up so far (too bad they can't get Bobby Baker back this time) but there's a definite Mr. Deeds: Sen. Howard H. Baker has youth, handsome earnestness, steely highly intentions, politeness to all, zeroing in for the well-mannered whack on rare and effective occasion; you sense there's a great future in this lad, '76 looming and the national eye out for another touch of Presidential youth with Teddy a sty in the voter's eye.

Sen. Herman Talmadge is in for mild, warm, restrained bucolic flavor, his Dixie accent soft neat contrast to Connecticut's Sen. Lowell Weicker who is an aristocrat but comes over the tube like an educated, polished, on-the-political and prosecutorial-ball as doggedly as an Irish Setter or oldtime Irish pol; are we slightly chauvinistic in our County Corking perception? So? He does loom a Spencer Tracyish hero. Spence was Irish, too, he says smugly.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye is slightly more scrutable than the stereotypical Polynesians sent from Central Casting and definitely a postwar-Oriental type satisfactory to liberals who retroactively bemoan Number One Son of Charlie Chan; better make that Mr. Moto. Takes a TV Photo.

Sen. Inouye could play the most sympathetic Oriental intellectual. His air cerebral, questions incisively searching, always polite. His inflection surely has to be pure Hawaiian but somehow there is a trace of Magnolia in his polished politeness, mostly organ-toned-highly-bred as if he'd tarried briefly in Savannah on his way from Harvard to Honolulu. Definitely a vocal wisp of the Confederate South; South Maui? Very shrewd casting, Central.

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya also is cast-against the cliches of hyphenated-American types.

His New Mexico manner is suave, open, sinister; he'd look terrible in a 40-gallon straw lid dangling as he slept in front of the local Tijuana bar. Also with very post-liberal intelligence; again, fine, Central Casting.

Sen. Edward J. Gurney of Florida may be sitting out some of the early plot; very deferential whenever we've seen him speak up; very pretty hair.

Committee Counsel definitely are supporting players, not a Bobby Kennedy of the McClellan Committee or Rudolph Halley of the Kefauver Investigation or Roy Cohn of Joe McCarthy's points of order. Chief counsel Samuel Dash looks like a quieter inquisitor rerun from many such casts of investigatory characters; minority counsel Fred D. Thompson only faintly extracts the replies properly pleasant in Richard Nixon's ears. He's appropriately opposite-inflection and conservatively well-mannered in contrast with candidly ultra-liberal Samuel Dash's proclaimed "fourth or fifth reason" for his delving — to get his slashes in anti-Nixon.

Now the witnesses summoned by Central Casting: James V. McCord definitely the spy in out of the cold, superbly well-rehearsed probably by himself, wastes nary a syllable, plainly knows his target of self-aggrandizing cynically tough self-explanatory diversion of opinion, and fact. Very persuasive, a faint suggestion of holding back a few deep, dangerous secrets.

Unfrosted spy McCord took more subtle casting than in the old days when a convicted and confessing agent was played by Gene Lockhart, whining and pleading from his captured position as a loser; McCord acts and speaks like a winner, as if his position suddenly might switch and he marches climactically right up on the podium with the Good Guys. Fabulously interesting, complex role, very modern anti-hero stuff, needs a superbly equipped villain-type actor; none of the magnified tough actorial exaggerations of a Lee Marvin; might need Laurence Olivier and test his talent for terminal subtlety.

Upended federal shamus John J. Caulfield also was conically cast, to type this time. He seems what he was, a smart New York detective with a native shrewdness this side of intellectualism whose performing purpose is a straightforwardly pleading righteousness. Lloyd Nolan might've played him.

Ex-N.Y. detective Anthony Ulasevich has a touch of the cliché about him; looks like the former president of the N.Y. Police Department's Police Benevolent Association, name of Kiernan; has a poised, perfunctory sense of humor, nothing seeringly witty or intellectual, but he's not brooding nor hurting from fear, his strength, his natural ex-cop reactions and sense of constabulatory purpose; never a cop-out; more a cop-in.

Bernard L. Barker the confessed convicted spy is there for earnest, not comic, relief.

THE MIGRAINE BLUES

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.

Migraine headaches are sometimes called "Sick Headaches" having their cause in the nervous system and bringing fourth severe agony. Chiropractic research has been convinced that migraine headaches would not be possible without interference of the nervous impulses carried across the spinal cord, and nerves, especially of the neck. Of hundreds of cases helped by Chiropractic, not one case of migraine has failed to show a definite pattern of nerve irritation and a great majority of cases show complete absence of symptoms with Chiropractic care. The pain in migraine is due to the accumulation of blood in the distended arteries in the head and Chiropractors find little trouble in reducing this condition by way of the nervous system.

(One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the scientific practice of Chiropractic, written by Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, Chiropractic Orthopedist, Brodheads-ville, Pa. Phone 992-4787).

A tough age

Child psychology books call it the "Age of Independence" . . . that time in a child's life when he or she is supercritical of parents and their ideas.

I call it the Jane Fonda syndrome.

They wake up negative. They go to bed negative. And if a parent is smart he won't turn his back on them. You get the feeling if you asked them what they wanted to be if you allowed them to grow up they'd pick "orphan."

"It's hard to pin down the exact moment when mother, a warm, plump symbol of apple pie and Geritol, wakes up one morning and discovers she is the Viet Cong in white anklets. But from that moment on, you can't do or say anything right."

In one day alone last week I racked up the following sins:

"You spoke to me in front of my friends."

"You think you know everything because you watch Jeopardy."

"You don't like my friend, Malcolm, because he goes barefoot in the winter."

"If you gave me the bike, I have every right to sell it."

"You think because he's little, he's perfect."

"You used my deodorant and it's personal."

"Boy, you don't even know how to shrink jeans yet."

"People who lose their car keys all the time shouldn't be allowed a license."

"You sneak up on me on the phone so you can hear."

"The sins I could absorb. It's the constant contradictions and interruptions that plague me. As I reported the other morning at breakfast, "I saw an amusing thing at the supermarket. . .

"You always say amusing," whined a voice. "Isn't anything just plain funny anymore?"

"Anyway," I started again, "I saw the fattest man ever . . . weighed about 300 pounds."

"The fattest man according to record weighed 568 pounds and was buried in a piano box," said the interruption.

"Anyway, he got stuck in the turnstile. . ."

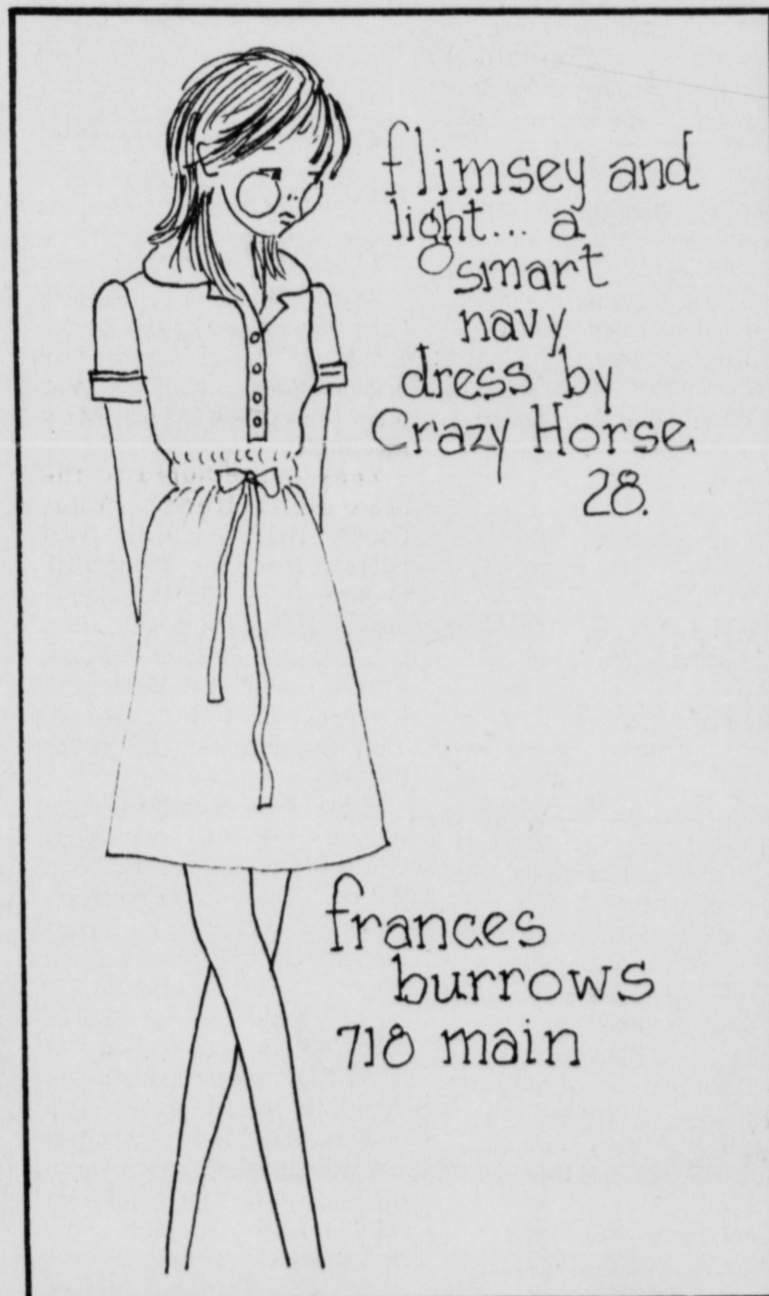

"I'm sure," said the voice belligerently.

"Are you saying I'm not telling the truth?"

"I'm saying if he saw the turnstile and weighed 300 pounds he wouldn't have been stupid enough to go into it in the first place."

"Look," I said heatedly, "I am sick and tired of having you disagree everytime I open my mouth. You contradict me with every sentence, protest every remark and dispute my every word. You wouldn't believe me if I told you Wednesday followed Tuesday!"

"Where did you hear that?" he asked cocking his head.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Mixed influences. Organize talents and know-how to promote your interests more efficiently. Some personal plans may have to be deleted from your program for the present.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Finesse and, possibly, a more original treatment will brighten everyday routine and stimulate your mind in more taxing matters. A good day for accomplishment.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Don't let dreams take the place of action, even though they may be highly inspirational. Favorable stellar influences stimulate your ingenuity and adaptability.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Business activities, organizational work and difficult chores will require more patience and study than usual. But much can be attained if you stay with it.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — While you go about routine, do not forget "extras" which may be overdue in handling. But avoid crowding yourself to the point of exhaustion.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Don't rest on past laurels. You can meet and, in spots, surpass competition. Be careful not to push too hard or at the wrong time, however.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Where you are not certain of your course, take time to gather more facts. Be sure you are not following "blind leads" or ill-informed persons.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Heed the suggestions of "lesser lights" as well as those of top-notchers. You may find some unexpected gems of wisdom.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — You may find yourself giving all thought to big jobs now, forgetting the little tasks which ARE significant. Consider carefully.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Give careful thought before making decisions. Those you make can have a far-reaching effect in the future. Personal interests highly favored.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — The field is wide open to your capabilities now. However, there are the usual admonitions to avoid errors through haste and overtaxing yourself.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — Stars suggest that you reach for highest attainment now, but don't set yourself an unreasonable schedule. Emphasize serenity, self-confidence.

YOU BORN TODAY, a typical Gemini, are something of a study in paradoxes. You are imaginative but, at the same time, realistic; impulsive yet, when necessary, will deliberate calmly and with exceptionally good judgment; sentimental about tradition and old friends, yet extremely progressive and always eager to make new friends.

The bidding:

Opening lead - three of clubs.

Bridge is not like tick-tac-toe, where the right play is automatic and there is no room for argument. Bridge is a far more complicated game and there is ample room for differences of opinion in both the bidding and play of the cards.

Consider this deal from last year's Vanderbilt team of four champions. At the first table, sitting East-West, were two world-famous experts — whose names are mercifully omitted — defending against South's opening three notrump bid.

West led his fourth-best club, won by the ace, and East returned the eight, his original fourth-best card. Declarer played the jack and West, after a long huddle, concluded that South had started with the J-10-9-7. He therefore ducked the jack in the hope of scoring three more club tricks later on.

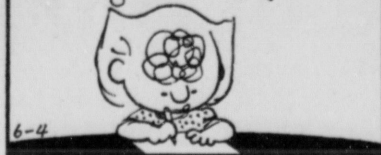

But this proved to be a miscalculation on West's part when declarer reeled off the rest of the tricks to make six notrump. West contended strongly that East should have returned the ten, not the eight, but East was in no mood to accept the logic of this contention — in view of the outcome.

At the second table — where the East-West pair were not so famous and, in fact, were not famous at all — the defense worked like a charm.

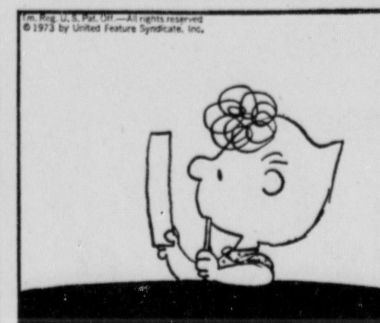

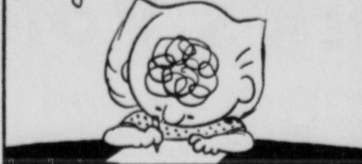

Here, also, against an opening three notrump bid, a club was led to the ace and the eight was returned. West did not find the defense either difficult or complicated. He won the jack with the queen, continued with the king, and played still another club. So the contract went down two as West went on to the next deal without even looking around for applause.

Ann Landers

Ex-head speaks

Dear Ann Landers: I've seen many letters in your column from teen-agers who smoke pot, but I don't recall ever having seen a letter from a pot-smoking housewife. There must be thousands, Ann, but maybe they don't write. I might be the first.

Our four children are between the ages of three and ten. My husband and I are in the middle-income bracket — perhaps higher. We live in the suburbs and he makes about $20,000 a year. I started to smoke pot after our last baby was born. At first, it relaxed me. It seemed as if I were looking at the world through rose-colored glasses. I was sure pot was the greatest thing since sliced bread. It minimized my problems and helped me cope with my children.

My husband didn't approve of pot but he never ordered me to quit using it. I should tell you I bought the stuff from a neighbor for $10 a lid. She said she started to smoke to get off booze. (Incidentally, the poor girl appears stoned most of the time and people think she still drinks.)

About six months ago my husband told me I was beginning to behave like my neighbor. I have to admit I staggered around a lot and my memory konked out. But worst of all, I was unsure of myself behind the wheel of a car. My perception of distance and time were distorted and I tried to fake it. Finally, after

I had a minor accident, my husband laid down the law — NO MORE POT.

I haven't touched a joint in six months but I am still not back to normal. I get headaches (which I never had before) and I feel slightly detached. But I'm determined to become my old self again and face life's problems with whatever inner resources I can muster. No more copping out. Please print this for all my sisters who are where I was seven months ago.

Ex-Head in Houston

Dear Ex: The major thrust of your story is that pot didn't solve your problems, it merely dulled your senses so you didn't care about them. Early, you believed pot helped you to cope, but actually it made you indifferent.

From the beginning I have been opposed to the legalization of marijuana and I will continue to fight it. Letters like yours substantiate the earlier judgments. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: Please say something about the mentally twisted people who buy police radios and listen by the hour, hoping to beat the police to the scene of the crime or a tragedy. Does this satisfy a sick craving for excitement or does it give them a feeling of superiority? Whatever it is, it's an awful thing which I can't understand. Furthermore, they are a nuisance. These weirdos push themselves in front and often hinder the work of the police, doctors, ambulance personnel, firemen and so on.

Please give me some insight as to why anyone would enjoy seeing a mangled body, a house on fire or a robber or a police officer with a bullet in his head?

Can't Figure It In Madison

Dear Madison: Why? Morbid curiosity. A sick thrill. Boredom with one's own humdrum existence. And perhaps the feeling of importance that comes from being on the scene when something sensational is happening.

"Twisted" is an apt description for people who have nothing better to do for entertainment. They are to be pitied.

Kiss and tell

By Jean Adams

ERNIE AND AL: (Q.) Ernie runs a service station down the road. When I go down there and there aren't any customers, Ernie puts his arms around me and kisses me. He kissed me three times yesterday. I know it isn't right but I like it.

Ernie treats me nice and is understanding. I have got to where I like being with him better than being with Al. Al and I are planning to get married when I finish school. I am 16 now. I have been trying to tell Al that I don't think I love him enough to marry him, but he doesn't understand.

Several times I have told him I am breaking up with him, but he doesn't stop coming to see me.

Another thing: Ernie doesn't come to see me or ask me for a date. Al does. I am afraid if I break up with him for good I won't have any boy friend at all.

Ann in Alabama

(A.) It is right for a 16-year-old girl to be kissed by a boy she likes and who likes her. It is not good judgment, however, for her to chase after him as you seem to be chasing after Ernie.

It is not sensible or fair, either, for you to hang onto Al just for fear you won't have a boy friend now or a husband later. Talk to Al again and make it very clear to him that this is the end, that you cannot go on with him because you don't love him.

Soon other boys, including Ernie, will know that you and Al are no longer steady, and they are free to date you.

Continue to be friendly with Ernie, but do not visit him at the station to get kissed.

(Jean Adams reads and considers every letter, but she regrets that she cannot answer each letter personally. Mail your questions and comments to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.)

Obituaries

Zimmer, Crowe veep, dies in S-burg home

STROUDSBURG — Henry F. Zimmer, Jr., 54, vice president of Crowe Insurance Agency in East Stroudsburg, died Friday in his home at 515 Brown St., Stroudsburg. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Constance Zimmer, at home.

Monroe County Coroner Daniel G. Warner Sunday ruled the death a suicide by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Born in Philadelphia, Zimmer was the son of Henry F. Zimmer, Sr. of Philadelphia and the late Mrs. Zimmer. He belonged to the Stroudsburg Rotary Club, Eagles, Elks and the Shawnee Country Club.

A U. S. Army veteran of World War II, he was captured in the Battle of the Bulge and spent 109 days as a prisoner of war. He was awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart, and was a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Survivors, in addition to his widow and father include, two sons, Kurt and Mark, both at home; a brother, Robert, Lafayette Hills; and a sister, Mrs. Mildred Root, Sylvania, Ohio.

Memorial funeral services will be held at 4 p.m. today at the cathedral of the Swedenborgian Church in Bryn Athyn, with burial in the cathedral cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of the William R. Grant Funeral Home, Southampton.

David E. Chase

EAST STROUDSBURG — David E. Chase, 18, of 209 Grove Street, East Stroudsburg, died Sunday at home.

Born in East Stroudsburg, he was the son of James R. Chase, Sr. and Carolyn (Smith) Chase. He was a resident of East Stroudsburg his lifetime.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by three brothers, James, Michael and Jerome Chase, all of East Stroudsburg; three sisters, Nadine, Yvonne and Michelle Chase at home; a maternal grandmother, Mrs. John F. Smith of East Stroudsburg, and paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Chase of East Stroudsburg.

Private funeral services will be held 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Lanterman Funeral Home, 27 Washington Street, East Stroudsburg, with Rev. William F. Wunder officiating. There will be no viewing.

Burial will be in Sand Hill Cemetery in Shoemakers.

Hilda D. Hall

BLAIRSTOWN — Hilda D. Hall, 74, of East Avenue, Blairstown, N.J. died Friday in Newton New Jersey Memorial Hospital.

Born in Hope, N.J., she was the daughter of Jahiel and Anola (Martis) Matlock. She was a lifelong area resident and was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Blairstown.

Survivors include a son, George of Woodbury, Conn.; a daughter, Miss Helen Hall of Blairstown; a sister Mrs. Bessie Johnson of Newton, N.J. and a brother, Edward Matlock of Bangor.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. today in the Newbaker Funeral Home, Blairstown.

Burial will be in the Cedar Ridge Cemetery, Blairstown. Expressions of sympathy may be made to the Blairstown Ambulance Squad.

Fremount publishes article

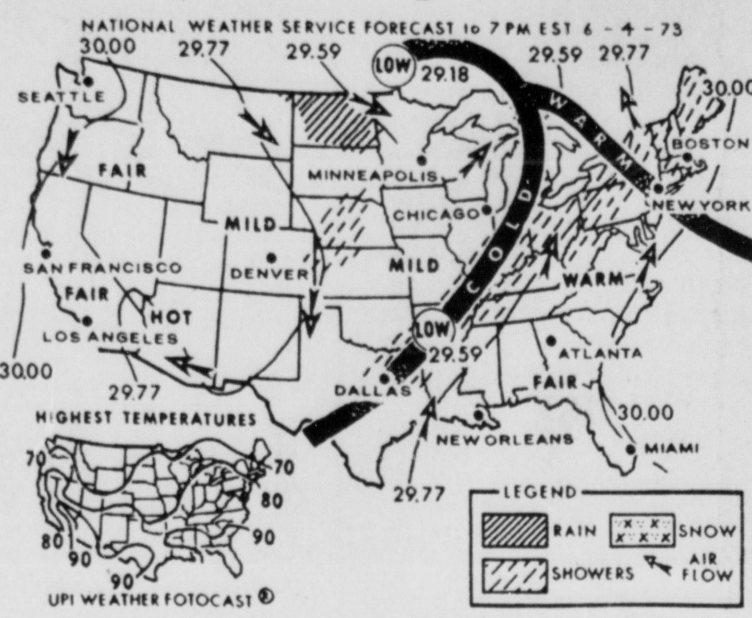

EAST STROUDSBURG — Dr. Henry N. Fremont, professor of biology at East Stroudsburg State College, has co-authored a paper titled, "Surface Charge on Plasmodium knowlesi and P. coatneyi Infected Red Cells of Macaca mulatta."

The study was concerned with the possible role of red cell surface charge in the adhesiveness of malaria-infected red blood cells to the blood vessel walls.

The study referred to the "stickiness" of infected cells that leads to some of the serious consequences of malaria in man. The results of the investigation have provided additional insights into the mechanisms involved in the disease process.

Fremont joined the faculty of East Stroudsburg State College in 1966.

Copters to spray for moth

STROUDSBURG — Three helicopters are again expected to continue state gypsy moth spraying in Monroe County today, according to District Forester John Bitzer of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources (DER).

One copter will finish the Reeder section and go on to Barton Glen. If time and weather conditions permit, the DER hopes to move this copter on to spray Wiscasset as well, Bitzer said.

The second DER helicopter will finish the Shoemakers area in Middle Smithfield Township and will move on to Pocono Heights, White Heron Lake and two areas of state forest land near Snow Hill in Middle Smithfield and Price Townships.

If time and weather permits, this copter will then move westward to Canadensis.

The third DER helicopter will spray Sun Valley in Chestnut Hill Township, then move west to Jonas Polk Township.

Graduate school revises general science program

EAST STROUDSBURG — The graduate program in general science at East Stroudsburg State College has recently undergone a revision to meet the changing needs of general science teachers in the elementary, middle, junior and senior high schools of Pennsylvania.

George A. Learn, Jr., associate professor of physical science at the college, who served as chairman of the faculty and coordinator of the administrative details involved in the revision, noted the general science program originally had a science research orientation.

However, low student enrollment in that program emphasizing the pure science aspects of chemistry and physics could not sustain the program.

In the spring of 1970, Dr. Clifford Swartz of the State University of New York at Stony Brook met with members of the general science faculty of the Graduate School at the college as a special consultant.

In July of that year, he reported to Dr. Eugene E. Stish, dean of the Graduate School at East Stroudsburg, on the needs of teachers of general, basic science in the elementary, middle, junior and senior high schools of the state.

Dr. Swartz felt the program at East Stroudsburg "should be tuned for the purposes of the current customers who are school teachers" and that the needs of other graduate students with special interests "should be met through individual reading and laboratory courses".

Accordingly, the program has been revised under the direction of Stish and Learn to pursue the objectives of the effective teaching of science at the middle and secondary school levels.

Involved in this revision is a modification of courses to include areas such as the "History and Philosophy of Science", "Curricular Trends in Science Teaching", "Laboratory and Classroom Techniques", "Contemporary Topics in Science", "Environmental Science", and "Specialized Workshops".

Included in the program coursework is content selected from the areas of biology, chemistry, physics and earth science judged appropriate to the needs of the middle and secondary school science teachers.

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record's circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column is designed to answer any questions or solve any problems — consumer, government or anything else. Send questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions must be in writing and signed in full. No telephone calls, please.

Q. We ordered six uniforms from S and H Uniforms in White Plains, N.Y. Two came, followed by a note saying two more were coming. When they came, we were told the same thing. We phoned the company and were informed it would be two months before the last two would arrive. Can you help speed them up? We all want to look alike.

The girls from King Arthur's, Sciota

A. Uniform five has been sent. Customer relations says they'll scrounge up number six, a red size 14, somehow. And we'll be out for a free meal sometime.

Q. You're my last resort. I ordered a magazine last July from Education Communications International. It never arrived and I'd like the $15 refunded.

C.L.S., Portland

A. You've barked up the right tree. But the Boise, Idaho clearing house doesn't carry the magazine you ordered, Dog Fancy, these days. Company will send you information outlining refund procedures.

Q. I sent for a "Smile" tote bag advertised on the back of Beech-Nut baby cereal in November. I still haven't received it.

G.G., Stroudsburg

A. You will shortly. Beech-Nut's premium supplier switched from Albany, N.Y. to Philadelphia. Orders were lost in the move, reports New York City company.

Q. In December, I sent a watch to Monitor Watch Service in Spring Valley, N. Y. One problem, though — they sent back the wrong watch. I returned it, which is more than they did for me.

M. E., East Stroudsburg R. D. 2

A. The Better Business Bureau of Bergen-Rockland-Passaic Counties is sending you complaint forms.

Q. We contracted with an area builder to erect our house. Over a year later, our house is still far from completed. Who can we contact to expedite completion?

G.H.N., Canadensis

A. The Bureau of Consumer Protection. It's located at 133 N. Fifth St., Allentown. Phone 215-821-0901.

Q. I'm going to take my vacation in August along the New Jersey shores. How could I make reservations without going down to shop around?

C.H., East Stroudsburg

A. Check under the Yellow Pages' "Travel Agencies and Bureaus." They'll be able to advise.

Q. What's the minimum wage for a boy of 17 who works cleaning windows and scrubbing floors?

E.M.K., Portland

A. It's $1.60 an hour, the U.S. Department of Labor points out.

Q. I'm soliciting your help for this problem, which may be of public advantage. As a member of the National Geographic Society, I've accumulated about 40 years of issues, tied and clearly marked. I'd like to dispose of it because of its bulk and it may be put to better use. I've contacted several local libraries and colleges. They either have such a collection, inadequate shelf space or just aren't interested.

R.H.W., Hawley

A. Pocono Mountain is. Superintendent Jim Davenport says the collection will be put to good use — in the district's middle school on shelves adjacent to the library.

"We're delighted at the opportunity to receive them," he said. "You just don't come by something like this every day."

And Davenport assures us he'll meet the stipulations you spelled out: The organization must place the collection in its reference area, no individuals can profit from the offering, and if disposed of, proceeds go to the general fund of the non-profit institution.

By the way, R.H.W. — you're okay in our book.

Q. Our neighbors have chickens, pigeons, ducks and a rooster all in the same coop. Every morning from 4 until 6:15 a.m. the rooster crows me out of a sound sleep. What's your suggestion?

M.H., East Stroudsburg

A. Squeal. Right to the borough council. The only type of livestock that's not allowed in the borough are pigs, according to a 1943 ordinance. Which doesn't help you. Nor does Ordinance 594, which prohibits "disorderly conduct" or "loud and unusual noise" or "profane, scandalous, insulting, lewd or filthy language." From persons only. Attend the next council meeting. Or ask your councilman to introduce a proposal to help you. Then if it passes, you'll be the one crowing about citizen action.

Q. Can you give me Ralph Nader's mailing address?

M.T., Saylorsburg

A. It's no secret. Write Nader at Box 19367, Washington D.C. 20036.

Q. I live on the Winona Falls Road. In front of my house is a large pothole. I've been hit in the face from the dirty water and fine sand in it when cars pass. When will it be fixed?

H.S., East Stroudsburg R.D. 3

A. It has been. Department of Transportation men worked overtime on Superintendent William Heller's orders after you contacted Write To Know. But keep this in mind: Monroe County gets limited funds — and has 900 miles of roads.

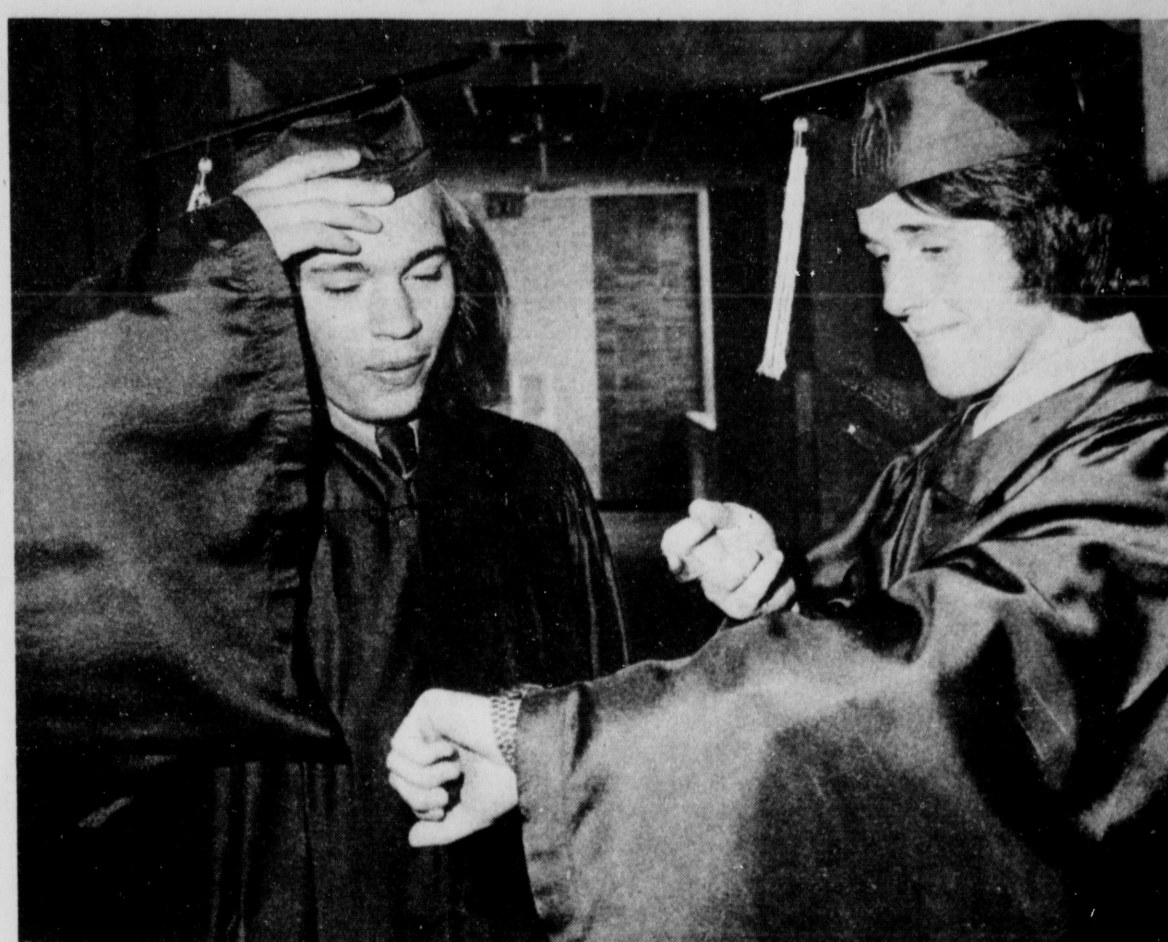

Q. We had our pictures taken by Studio Photographers Inc. of Philadelphia. We're very unhappy with the prints. Who can we report this to?

M.C., East Stroudsburg

A. The Better Business Bureau of Eastern Pennsylvania. The 401 Walnut St., Philadelphia, office is sending you complaint forms.

Sue Grakowski received Jill Werkheiser's help at Notre Dame . . .

. . . as Albert Ingetti and Joseph Hametz sighed at Pocono Central Catholic.

Seventy graduate at parochial schools

EAST STROUDSBURG — A total of 70 seniors graduated in commencement exercises held Saturday at Pocono Central Catholic High School in Cresco and Notre Dame High School in East Stroudsburg.

The Most Rev. J. Carroll McCormack, bishop of the Scranton Diocese, presided at both commencements and concelebrated a graduation Mass at Pocono Central Catholic High with members of the school's board of pastors.

George J. Machinchick, director of admissions at King's College in Wilkes-Barre and president of the Scranton diocesan school board, was guest speaker at the Pocono Central Catholic graduation and spoke to the 40 graduates on the merits of strong family units and Christian education in today's morally and socially turbulent world.

Central Catholic Valedictorian Eileen Shannon spoke on the importance of individuality. "Sometimes you have . . . to stand up and do something that you may be scared to do, something you're afraid no one will agree with, but something you believe is right," she said.

Quoting from Andrew Greeley, Miss Shannon said, "It always takes courage to be what we are capable of, and since we are capable of so much, we will be required to display great courage, perhaps more than we can imagine even now."

The Rev. Dexter L. Hanley, S. J., president of the University of Scranton, was guest speaker at the Notre Dame High graduation and addressed 30 seniors on areas of personal development on which each graduate should concentrate and the value of Christianity in this development.

Notre Dame Valedictorian Daniel Howe spoke on the meaning of success and the personal and social aspects of succeeding in post-high school life.

"The best way to go about explaining how to be a success is to classify it into two types, that is, material success, or accumulation of wealth, and egotistical success, or success in one's own mind," Howe stated.

After comparing various honest and dishonest ways people have throughout history achieved material "success," Howe emphasized egotistical success and said he felt this had been achieved for him in high school through appreciation for freedom, discipline and ability.

Noting that man is not perfect, Howe said, "it is the man that realizes his defects, accepts them and turns them into assets that will be the true success, that will gain true happiness. He will make it big."

Notre Dame Salutatorian Jill Werkheiser quoted John Knowles and states, "everyone has a moment in history which belongs particularly to him" . . . For us, this moment was the years of our formal education."

Miss Werkheiser stressed the importance of individuality in making one's mark upon the world and in being affected by the world.

Pocono Central Catholic graduates were Joseph Hametz, Brian Hitt, Mark Horvath, Albert Ingetti, Donald Katchmere, John Kessler, Stephen Komenko, Jerome Lewis, Raymond LaVigne, Michael Lewis, George Leonard and James Nicoll.

Also, David Pisko, Nicholas Roble, Raymond Roble, Theodore Sauter, Joseph Shafer, Stephen Stettler, Michael Wash, Mary Ann Bartnick, Ellen Carota, Brigid Flynn, Mary Anne Godleski, Sharon Hametz and Andrea Hunt.

Also, Helene Hardy, June Herrmann, Teresa Indermaur, Christine Leonard, Barbara Lewis, Bonnie Mattice, Laurie Mattice, Rachel Mayung, Kathryn Noone, Elizabeth Nosak, Kathleen Regan, Colleen Reiz, Eileen Shannon, Kathleen Sherno and Theresa Swiderski.

Notre Dame graduates were Victoria Bartleson, Margaret Bensinger, Kathleen Bishop, Joan Dailey, Nancy Donovan, Victor Dougher, Patricia Fallon, Phyllis Farda, Terry Gougher, Susan Gretkowski and Mary Gwiazdowski.

Also, Daniel Howe, Victoria Kasperski, Timothy Kearney, Michael Konawalik, Jean Ann LaBar, Susan LaBar, Mary Mosteller, Deborah Poalillo, Theresa Resh, Martha Schellhammer, Michael Shamp and Jennifer Shanley.

Also, Andrew Shukaitis, Marlene Storm, Anne Sweeney, Terence Toner, Katherine Van Why, John Vowcicefski and Jill Werkheiser.

Commission says 'no problems'

Will pollution hit Delaware River?

NEW YORK — The Delaware River above the proposed Tocks Island Lake will be saved from the fate of pollution, according to a Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) statement.

Nutrient runoffs into the Delaware River are viewed as controllable pollutants whose treatment costs will receive special federal priorities.

The statement, which stems from a DRBC study conducted by the State University of New York at Binghamton, said data collected on runoffs into streams that feed the Delaware above Port Jervis indicates that eutrophication, or algae bloom, generated by the runoffs is not a serious problem.

Eutrophication is a condition that consumes oxygen in streams, leading to the destruction of other life.

The study, yet released, includes that "a tremendous reduction in nutrients occurs between waste source farms and the streams."

In addition, the DRBC said, soil surveys taken around the proposed lake indicate that spray irrigation or land disposal of treated sewage is possible, thus keeping sizable portion of nutrients out of the lake.

The statement was included in a summary of issues surrounding the proposed Tocks Island Dam and Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area Projects, distributed Thursday during the DRBC's annual meeting.

The runoffs, one of the prime concerns of environmentalists who are fighting the twin projects, have centered around pollution control of poultry farms, most of them in Sullivan County.

The county lies in an upper reach of the Delaware Basin that is being eyed for classification as a scenic wildlife preserve. The preservation district would span the river from Port Jervis to Hancock.

Another issue in controlling the runoffs is the financing of treatment measures. Henry Diamond, New York's Commissioner of Environmental Conservation, said after the DRBC meeting Thursday that "technology is limited" in treating the runoffs beyond existing measures.

According to the DRBC statement, Congress is viewing "polluting" problems as entirely separate as a matter of national policy by providing that no pollution discharges will be tolerated after another decade."

District judicial candidate Phillip H. Williams, left, discusses this fall's campaign with U. S. Senator Richard Schweiker at Republican fund-raising dinner held Saturday night at Pocono Manor Inn.

Schweiker calls scandal 'cancer'

POCONO MANOR — Nearly 100 Republican men turned out Saturday to hear U. S. Senator Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.) speak at a $50-a-plate GOP stag dinner Saturday night at Pocono Manor Inn.

Monroe County GOP chairman Ed Katz was toastmaster for the fund raising affair. Congressman Joseph McDade (R-10), State Representatives Frederick Hobbs and William Foster, former State Representative Russell Eshpach and Monroe County judicial candidate Phillip H. Williams.

Schweiker touched on a number of topics during his address, emphasizing two areas which have been the sources of much public concern recently: the Watergate affair and the national energy crisis.

Stating the Watergate affair had paralyzed the federal government, particularly the executive branch, Schweiker compared the incident to "a cancer which should be treated and surgically removed promptly so that the government can move on to other pressing problems."

The Senator commented on a number of energy crisis bills currently pending in Congress, noting in particular one piece of legislation which would have a great affect on Pennsylvanians in particular through encouragement of the use of coal over gas and nuclear power.

Firemen, sprinklers contain plant blaze

was contained by the building's sprinkling system and two volunteer fire departments.

Stroud Township Fire Chief Ray Silver said the fire erupted at 1:15 a.m. and was confined to an electrical furnace. He said he had no estimate of damages.

Silver said firemen used 10 gallons of base foam and one and a half inch hoses to douse the fire. He believes the blaze was caused by a malfunction in the furnace's electrical system.

The fire chief said about 70 men and seven trucks from the Stroud Township Fire

Dept. were on the scene more than an hour.

He said he called the Acme Hose Co. of East Stroudsburg for assistance because the fire occurred in an industrial plant.

Acme's assistant fire chief, William LaBarre, said 42 men and three trucks from his company were at the scene.

In another fire, 36 men and four trucks from the Stroudsburg Fire Dept. responded to a car blaze at Bryant Street and Park Avenue at 12:45 a.m. Saturday.

Fire Chief Tom Philips said the car was owned by John Nielson of Neptune, N. J. He said it was caused by a backfire through the air cleaner.

Coolbaugh Township police reported a truck accident on the Tobyhanna-Gouldsboro Road at 7:40 p.m. Saturday.

They said Daniel Quick, 45, Gouldsboro, was driving north when he lost control. He was reportedly treated by a local physician. Police said his 1970 pickup was demolished.

State police at Milford reported a car-motorcycle mishap at 8:30 a.m. Saturday which injured Michael Cerciello, 13, Dingmans Ferry.

Police said Cerciello was driving a motorcycle east on Legislative Rte. 51006 near Dingmans Ferry when he veered into the west bound lane, striking a car operated by Ronald Ratner, 35, Bayside, N.Y.

Cerciello was taken to St. Francis Hospital, Port Jervis.

Police recover stolen vehicle

BEL AIRE, MD. — A car that was stolen from the Big N parking lot in Stroudsburg Saturday night was recovered by the Maryland State police at 9:40 p.m. Sunday.

The car is owned by Frederick Lee, 1835 Main St., Stroud Township. Stroudsburg police will issue warrants for a man and woman today and are expected to extradite them.

Employment shows gain of 1,000 workers

STROUDSBURG — Total employment in the Pocono Mountain area (Monroe, Pike and Wayne Counties) rose by 1,100 — 1.1 per cent — from February to April this year, according to the Bureau of Employment Security.

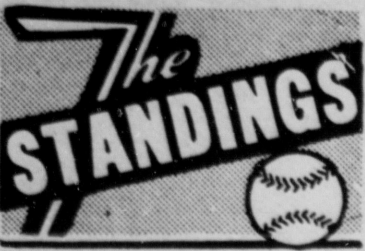

At the same time, unemployment dropped by 400 workers or one per cent. Unemployment stands at 4.2 per cent.

Employment increases were attributed to an upsurge in seasonal employees — a gain of 700 was reported. These workers found 300 jobs in contract construction and 500 in service and miscellaneous; these new jobs were offset by the loss of 100 positions in federal government.

The additional 400 jobs accounting for the employment increase came this way: 200 in manufacturing industries and 100 apiece in non-electrical and electrical machinery and textile products.

Employment in mid-April of this year is up by 1,400 workers over 1972's total at the same time. Nonmanufacturing industries opened up the most new jobs — 900 — while manufacturing positions increased by 400.

Weiskopf takes $40,000 Kemper prize

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Tom Weiskopf, who had promised when he took the third round lead not to play conservative golf, kept his word Sunday and carded a solid 4-under-par 68 to win the $40,000 first prize in the Kemper Open by a three stroke margin over Lanny Wadkins.

The 30-year-old Weiskopf, winning his seventh career tournament and his second this year, had a total of 271, 17-under-par, the best 72-hole score in the Kemper's history.

Wadkins, on his second year in the PGA tour, shot a 3-under-par 69 Sunday on the 7,219-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course, longest on the pro circuit this year, for a 274 total, 14-under-par.

Weiskopf had rounds of 65, 70 and 68 on his first three days in the Kemper, which he won previously in 1971. Sunday's triumph in the $200,000 event marked the first time anyone had won the five-year-old tournament twice. Wadkins had carded 66, 68 and 71 on the earlier days.

Weiskopf had five birdies and a bogey in his final round and Wadkins five birdies and two bogeys.

The Weiskopf-Wadkins duel left the rest of the field far behind. Lou Graham shot a 67 Sunday, second round leader Leonard Thompson a 71 and Dave Hill a 71 for a three-way tie at third place with 11-under-par 277.

Finishing at 10-under-par 278 were Dan Sikes with a final round 67, Mac McLendon with a 67, Ken Still a 73, Art Wall with a 70, John Lister a 67 and Cesar Sanudo a 73.

With his victory Sunday, Weiskopf passed Wadkins on the money list, moving to fourth place with $121,822 while Wadkins fell to fifth at $114,521 —including $22,800 for his second place finish.

"I've worked very hard and I didn't sleep very much at all this week," said Weiskopf. "I wanted to win so much."

A master of the long distance drive, the former Ohio State star now living in Columbus, Ohio, said he has "learned a lot" this year. "I've worked hard and it paid off," he said.

Weiskopf started the afternoon with a birdie on the 422-yard, par four first hole, then had successive birdies on 7, 8 and 9.

On the first hole, he hit a seven iron to within four feet. On No. 7 he hit within 12 feet, and on No. 8 and No. 9 to within three feet.

On the back nine, Weiskopf bogied the 349-yard No. 14 hole when he hit a sand wedge shot into the back bunker, then birdied No. 16 to wrap things up.

Weiskopf lost last week to Jack Nicklaus, who did not play in the Kemper, by two strokes and said he was confident he could beat Nicklaus in the future.

"I'm not afraid of anybody," he said. "When I'm playing my best I can beat anyone and that includes Nicklaus."

He said he would lay off the tour next week and practice for the U.S. Open.

Wadkins, who started the day tied for second with Still at 11-under, said he was "very pleased with my finish."

Winner of this year's Byron Nelson Classic, Wadkins said "I wouldn't have believed I could shoot 14-under here."

"Now I know how Tom felt last week," he said, referring to Weiskopf's loss to Nicklaus with a 14-under-par. "I don't think anyone could shoot any better than he did today."

Weiskopf's 271 broke the old tournament record set by Dale Douglass in 1969 by three strokes.

Jenkins fifth in triple jump

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind. — Lenny Jenkins of East Stroudsburg State College improved more than a foot over his 1972 third-place performance and beat the defending champion, but he still finished fifth in the triple jump at the NCAA College Division Track and Field Championships Saturday.

Jenkins leaped 50-6, breaking his school record of 50-1/2 set in tying for the qualifying lead Friday. He had done 49-2 1/4 in placing third a year ago.

Anthony Terry of California State at Davis won the event at 51-6. Chester Roberts of California State at Northridge was second at 51-2 1/4 with Richard Brockington of Norfolk State third at 51-2.

Emory Montgomery of Cal Poly Pomona, who had tied Jenkins in the qualifying, was fourth at 51-1 1/2. Hugh Jacobsmeyer of Northern Colorado rounded out the place-winners, finishing sixth at 50-5 1/2.

Tom Geradine of Northeast Missouri State, last year's winner, failed to place with a distance of 50-1.

Jenkins, a sophomore from Reading, just became ESSC's second two-time national place-winner. Javelin thrower Ed Long placed second in 1971 and fourth last year.

John Briner, the Warriors' other NCAA competitor, was bothered by aching feet caused by the extremely hot weather and failed to finish the three-mile run finals.

American applications pace British Amateur

PORTRCAWL, Wales (UPI) — Entries from eight overseas countries were among the 222 received for the week-long British amateur golf championship which begins today.

The United States, with 55, tops the list while entries have also come from Australia, Argentina, Brazil, Canada, France, Kenya and Spain.

The tournament was last played at Portcawl — the only Welsh course to have staged a major championship — in 1965 when British Walker Cup captain Mike Bonallack was the winner.

Bonallack, bidding for his sixth victory and in pursuit of John Ball's record of eight Amateur wins, is among the elite seeded players — all British.

Glen Brook tournament captured with score of 58

STROUDSBURG — The four-man team of Dr. George Ockershausen, Alan Gould, Tom Williams and Craig Transue captured first place in the four-man, best ball golf tournament at Glen Brook Country Club Sunday with a score of 58, 14 under par.

The four-man team tallied scores of 28-30 — 58, good for a three-shot victory over the second place team of Craig Potcher, Craig Besecker, Jim Evans and Don Falcone, which shot a 61.

Ironically, Ockershausen is the golf coach at East Stroudsburg State College and Potcher, a graduate of Stroudsburg High School, is a member of the Warriors' links' team.

A team led by August Lockwitch tied with Potcher's team for second place, but lost on a match of cards. Potcher's having a two on the first hole with handicap and Lockwitch's a three.

Fourth place honors in the 19-team, 76-man event went to a team composed of Dr. Angelo Ortenzi, Mag Loney Sr., John Eiler and Joe Stasa, also with a 61. But the fourth place team had a four on the first hole.

The 18-hole shotgun event was under the direction of Dick Talbot, president of the Glen Brook Men's Association. Following the round of golf, a buffet luncheon was served to competitors.

Mrs. Court French winner; halfway to 'Grand Slam'

PARIS (UPI) — Thirty-year-old Australian Margaret Court outfooted 18-year-old Chris Evert of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., 6-7, 7-6, 6-4 today to win the women's singles title in the $133,000 French Open tennis championship.

Defeated in her May 13 "battle of the sexes" against Bobby Riggs, Mrs. Court showed she could win in a two-hour 17-minute contest against a much younger player.

The win worth $8,300, moved Mrs. Court halfway to her second grand slam.

She has now won the first two of tennis's four bigtime international tournaments. Miss Evert displayed magnificent control and cool steady play but faltered in the final set to lose her bid for her first win in one of the big four tournaments.

She fought back three times in the first set and appeared a good bet to win the match.

But Mrs. Court proved the more consistent in the final set and the Floridian committed more unforced errors.

"I would like to compliment Margaret for gutsing out the match," Miss Evert said.

Mrs. Court said: "It was one of the toughest finals I've ever had."

The American won the first tie-break 7-5 by reeling off the last five consecutive points.

But Mrs. Court showed she could come from behind too, winning the second set tie-break 8-6 after being down 5-4.

If Mrs. Court can go on to win the U.S. Open and Wimbledon crowns she will be the first woman to win the grand slam twice. She won it for the first time in 1970. This year she has already captured the Australian title.

Mrs. Court broke Miss Evert's service to win the final game. She set up the match point with a backhand volley winner to lead 15-40. Then Miss Evert hit a backhand out of court wide to end the match.

In all there were seven service breaks in the final set with Mrs. Court getting four.

After a weak match start Miss Evert won most of the long rallies. Her placement and timing worked successfully.

She came back from 0-3 in the first set to pull even at 4-4. Then serving at 5-6, she fell behind 15-40. But Mrs. Court could win neither set point.

The younger woman charged the net to beat back both points. Then she made her most important comeback in the tie-break.

In the second set Miss Evert broke in the eighth game to serve for victory at 5-3. But Mrs. Court broke back without the American scoring a point.

The Australian, current leader of the Virginia Slims Tournaments, won the tie-break when Miss Evert hit a groundstroke long.

Miss Evert collected $3,255 for her second place finish.

In men's quarterfinal action 22-year-old Adriano Panatta of Italy beat Tom Okker of the Netherlands 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4. Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia ousted Paolo Bertolucci of Italy 6-4, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The 33-year-old Yugoslav used a booming serve and a steady ground game to outclass stocky Bertolucci who sometimes played erratically.

The two winners will meet in the semifinals.

In the men's doubles final, Okker teamed with John Newcombe of Australia to beat Ilie Nastase of Romania and Jimmy Connors, Belleville, Ill., 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

W. End, Saylorsburg tab 'Pocono' victories

STROUDSBURG — West End rallied for four runs in the eighth inning and Saylorsburg did likewise in the ninth Sunday to record victories in Pocono Mountain League action.

West End began its rally with one out to score a 4-2 upset victory over Bowmanstown. Pete Wilhelm singled with one out, moved to second on Don Poorman's single and both runners advanced on an infield out.

After Bill Cadue walked to load the bases, Gary Kirkwood singled for two runs to tie the game. Tom Dailey then grounded to short, but the throw to first was wild, permitting both Cadue and Kirkwood to score.

Doug Miller went all the way for West End to earn the victory, while Don Metzgar, who had singled in Bowmanstown's second run, took the loss.

Glen Bisbing's home run, a two-run job, broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth inning to give Saylorsburg an 8-4 victory and sole possession of first place.

Trailing 3-0, Reeders rallied to tie the score before Bisbing homered for the victory. Tom Morken, who had three hits for the winner, also homered, while Bob Peetchatka, who took the loss for Reeders, had two hits for Reeders, as did Tom Kishbaugh.

Bob Beck got the victory in relief for Saylorsburg, which now leads the league with a 3-0 record.

Giant win skein at four on 5-4 win over Phillies

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two-run ninth inning homers by Dave Rader and Garry Maddox Sunday lifted the San Francisco Giants to a 5-4 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies and extended their winning streak to four games.

The Phillies, behind Ken Brett, carried a 4-1 lead into the ninth but Dave Kingman opened the inning with a single and Rader homered to cut the deficit to a run.

That finished Brett and Mac Scarce came on to walk pinch-hitter Willie McCovey. Billy Wilson replaced Scarce and seemingly had the game wrapped when he induced Bobby Bonds to hit into a double play.

But Tito Fuentes singled and then Maddox unloaded his third homer of the season.

Charlie Williams, who pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the top of the ninth, gained credit for the victory, his second in as many decisions. Wilson was tagged with the loss and evened his record at 1-1.

Greg Luzinski drove in a pair of Phillie runs with his fifth homer and two singles. A fifth inning single by Tommy Hutton and a sixth inning double by Brett accounted for the other runs as the Phillies suffered their sixth straight loss.

Jim Barr started for the Giants and left after 5 1/3 innings after the Phillies reached him for 10 of their 12 hits and three of their runs. Jim Willoughby and Sam McDowell preceded Williams and held the Phillies off in time for the ninth inning heroics.

off Dodger reliever Tommy John in the ninth inning. It was his third homer of the season, all in the past week.

McAnally posted his third victory in four decisions.

Dodgers drop second straight to Expos, 4-1

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hal Breeden walked with the bases loaded and two out in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 deadlock and Ernie McAnally pitched a six-hitter Sunday as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Montreal Expos beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 before an Old-Timers Day crowd of 34,785.

Al Downing walked Breeden on four straight pitches after getting an 0-2 count on the Expo first baseman to bring in Tim Foli from third base.

Taking their second straight from the Dodgers, the Expos loaded the bases on singles by Foli, Ron Woods and a walk to Bob Bailey.

Clyde Mashore hit a two-run homer into the leftfield pavilion

Lyle saves Yankees' 3-2 victory

NEW YORK (UPI) — Horace Clarke banged out four hits including a run-producing double to highlight a three-run sixth inning Sunday and lead the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory over the California Angels.

A Bat Day crowd of 60,108 saw the Angels score one run and fill the bases with one out in the ninth before reliever Sparky Lyle retired Vada Pinson on a pop fly and pinch-hitter Bobby Brooks on a strikeout ending the game and preserving George Medich's fourth win of the year. With one down in the Yankee sixth, Graig Nettles slashed a ground-rule double to left. Thurman Munson walked on four pitches and Felipe Alou, playing in his 2,001st major league game, singled to left, scoring Nettles and moving Munson to third. Gene Michael grounded out, scoring Munson, and Clarke followed with his second double of the game and third safety to score Alou.

California scored first in the sixth. Designated hitter Frank Robinson slammed a ground-rule double—his second two-bagger of the game—to right, and moved to third on an infield grounder. After an intentional pass to Mike Epstein, Bill Grabarkewitz hit into a force play to score Robinson.

Medich struck out four while giving up two walks before giving way in the ninth to Lyle. Lyle replaced Medich with two on and none out and yielded a run-scoring single to Winston Llenas before retiring the side.

Pittsburgh's Flaherty — new power on state scene?

By ANDREW L. LLUBERES
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Whether he likes it or not, Mayor Pete (Peter F.) Flaherty has been thrust into a larger political spectrum. Flaherty made political history in Pennsylvania's second largest city May 15 by winning the Democratic and Republican nominations without the endorsement of either party. Almost immediately, his friends and opponents began mentioning him for higher office. Philadelphia's Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, a one-time Republican and supporter of President Nixon's re-election, publicly told Flaherty he would support him in a race against Democratic Gov. Milton J. Shapp. In congratulating Flaherty on his primary victory, even Shapp conceded the strengths of Flaherty's political future. But the mayor has not been a power in statewide Democratic politics, and his involvement in the 1972 presidential election could be described as being disinterest, at best. During a preprimary interview in his spacious, fifth-floor office at the City-County Building, Flaherty minimized his future ambitions and defended his participation in the presidential election. The mayor made these replies to questions. Q. Have you ever considered higher office? A. "I haven't and I'm not looking ahead because the office I have here comes first with me." Q. Why are you running for re-election? A. "It's been three and a half years since I took office. I don't think you can start a new road such as we have started here in City Hall, make the changes we have made and then drop it. I guess what you can really say is that I want to continue... go into the second term and bring the people of this city a better form of government than they ever had." Q. Why did you break with the Democratic organization after being elected to City Council in 1965 and developing into what many regarded as former Mayor Joseph M. Barr's protégé? A. "Because it wasn't working. It wasn't doing the job at all for the people of the city. All it brought them was higher taxes and poorer services. It became self-defeating, feeding on itself. Not only elections revolved around the machine or organization, but every facet of city government. You can't make the decisions in this office today, and make them right, if you're going to let the party have the control. One (of his administration's goals) was to clean out a lot of the deadwood that existed in the patronage system here at City Hall. The political ward chairman ran the place and the mayor was kind of his puppet. In other words, the payroll was looked upon more as if it was an instrument of the organization, rather than a service-performing group of employees." Q. What do you see as your administration's main achievement? A. "When we took office, the city was in a deficit position. The previous mayor (Barr) called myself and my opponent in and said, 'Whichever of you win, I have bad news for you because you're going to inherit a bankrupt city.' One of the things we did was establish the city as being able to be managed on a sound fiscal basis; that cities don't have to go bankrupt; that there is a lot of duplication and waste we can and did take out of city government." Flaherty, 48, the son of Irish immigrants, is an active, Kennedy-like campaigner when he wants to be. However, he did not come off the defensive or join the fray in the primary campaign, and disagreed with his image as a maverick. "That word maverick; I've never understood it or looked it up," he said. "I suppose the only thing it means is that I'm a maverick towards the old organization."

Q. Would you agree with one veteran political reporter's characterization of your race against City Councilman Richard S. Caliguiri as what "may be the city's biggest test of charisma vs. organizational politics?" A. "Well, I really don't pay much attention to images. I just do the job as best I can. When you're in public office, your record speaks better than your image. I feel I've gone out into the community on major issues... and when I do go out, often the reason it's not known is because I don't call, like (New York Mayor John V.) Lindsay, the television studios and tell them to have their cameras out focusing on me. I don't go that way and I don't think it's a legitimate way to go into the community." Q. In the last presidential election and on issues of national importance in general, you have maintained what some see as indifference, especially when compared to the active campaign participation of Mayor Rizzo and Gov. Shapp. Do you feel that view is justified? A. "With me, the city of Pittsburgh comes first. National politics is something that we weren't silent on. I met with all the candidates when they came during the campaign. But the McGovern forces made it clear that they wanted to rely on the Democratic organization for their support. That was certainly their right, and that's the way they went." Q. Does this detachment stem from a personal philosophy of how big city mayors should act, or do you feel the two-party system is outdated? A. "No, my first duty is to the city. This job is very time consuming as it is. I think it's just a question of first things first. I believe in the two-party system and I am a Democrat, but the Democratic organization as I see it here isn't an effective instrument for the people of this city." Q. Do you think it could be made one? Were the olive branch to be offered or the opportunity presented, would you be interested in remolding the party to the reforms you feel necessary? A. "I don't think it can (be made an effective instrument) at present. I think it's an instrument for maintaining the Democratic organization in power."

Michigan joke loses its humor

DETROIT (UPI) — The joke — $11 billion worth of humor — is on Michigan. A group of Ohio businessmen, the mayor of Toledo and the Toledo Press Club bartender, Miss Lynn Robie, are plenty tired of their borderline city being used as a target for countless Michigan jokes. Jokes such as those from Detroit disc jockey J. P. McCarthy who has subjected Michigan's southern neighbor to slights like: "The Toledo Transit Authority will have an emergency meeting this week to decide whose turn it is to wash the bus." So tired are they of being a laughing stock that they're asking $11,668,900,042.92 in reparations from the state of Michigan. "It's a SCANDAL the way Toledo has been treated by the state of Michigan for the last 140 years," said a full page ad placed in a Toledo newspaper earlier this week by the group. SCANDAL just happens to be the name of the group. It's an acronym for something that's about as difficult to understand as it is hard to figure out how the billion-dollar figure was determined — "The Select Committee to Arrange a New Deal to Avoid Litigation."

SCANDAL said it is seeking reparation for the now infamous Michigan-Ohio border war of 1835-36. The war, in which the only casualties were one mule and a slightly stabbed soldier, was mounted over whether the Ohio-Michigan line fell to the north or south of Toledo. The victor depends on where you're from. Michiganders consider themselves the winners simply because Toledo ended up on the Ohio side of the border. SCANDAL arrived at the $11 billion-plus figure, it says, using a highly complex formula to tabulate the damage on the 1835 Ohio cabbage crop during the border dispute, and the wear and tear on the Ohio Militia, multiplied that by three and then added a 1 1/2 per cent monthly interest charge on the unpaid balance for each month since 1835. It says it'll accept cash or credit cards in lieu of payment, with a two per cent discount if payment is made within 30 days. SCANDAL says it will use the money to build a wall along the Michigan-Ohio border that will prevent Ohio high school football players from ending up at Michigan universities.
